FOLDING BEDS

You Can Do Almost Anything

With our Goshen folding bed. There used to be an idea that two into one wouldn't go; this bed upsets the notion completely. It doesn't, like the chameleon, change its color, but it does change its character, and it is as handsome as a bed at night as it is as a book-case in the day-time. It is one of the happiest combinations of modern ingenuity, and in an instant it turns your sleeping apartment into a handsomely appointed library. Perhaps you have an idea that this double advantage carries with it a double cost. It does not. Call and see it and learn the price.

WAGON LOADS!

You see our wagons every day in every part of the city delivering great loads of Furniture, Carpets, Stoves and Household goods. You see them oftener and better loaded than those of all our competitors together. We mention this as a pointer to you, that as sure as people come to our store and get our prices and terms they are satisfied; they buy. Our terms, prices and goods are the best to be had.

THE SIXTH

Annual Convention of the Knights of Labor.

Delegates Are Arriving in St. Louis.

The Old Officers Will Be Re-Elected.

Powderly Will Not Refuse Another Term.

The Great Terrence Does Not Want to Quit His Official Position at This Stage of the Game.

St. Louis, Nov. 14.—The delegates to the sixth annual convention of the Knights of Labor, which is to be held in this city, commencing to-morrow, are coming in slowly.

The greater number are looked for today. Those who arrived yesterday were Hugh Cavanaugh, Cincinnati; John Devlin, Detroit; Charles Martin, Geo. Murry and T. B. Maguire, of New York city.

The B. & O. train which had on board Master Workman T. V. Powderly and a large number of eastern delegates, was to have arrived last afternoon, but it was nine hours behind time and did not arrive until early this morning.

A prominent member of the order said to a reporter this morning: It is likely that the old officers will be elected without opposition.

Some time ago there was talk of Powderly resigning at this meeting. This is not the case, for Mr. Powderly does not have to resign. His term, as well as those of all the officers of the organization expire at this meeting.

Should Powderly, however, refuse to allow his name to go before the convention for re-election, it is possible that his successor will be A. W. Wright, of Toronto, as he is one of the brainiest in the order.

John W. Hayes, the national secretary, is already here. A reporter had a long talk with him this morning, in which the labor situation generally was gone over. "Our convention this year will do nothing more than to indorse what has been done by previous assemblies," said he. "I know of nothing of national importance that will come up. The constitution will be changed somewhat, not in effect, however, but the constitution as it now stands is too long, cumbersome and complicated. It will be boiled down, as you newspaper men would say. Yet it will not be changed a particle. We think that by putting it in a more brief form it will be better understood by our members."

CHOLERA.

Five Cases on Board a Steamship.

Montreal Authorities Will Make a Most Thorough Investigation.

f Montreal, Nov. 14.—It is reported that there are five cases of cholera on board the Allen steamship Circassian, now off Father Point, and that orders have been given to stop her at the Grosse Isle quarantine.

No authentic news has been received here, but Dr. La Chappelle, of the provincial health society, says he has received a dispatch that there are five cases on board, but will not say what they are.

SAD CASES.

St. Marys, Nov. 14.—(Special)—Philip Echman of Loramie township, Shelby county, was taken to the asylum at Dayton yesterday. He is an epileptic and almost hopeless.

Mrs. David Fulker, 32 years of age, also of Loramie township, has been adjudged insane and will be taken to Dayton.

Drive them away—the aches, pains, weaknesses and ailments that make woman's life miserable. Some of them may be serious, and of long standing; they'll need time, perhaps, and patience. But all of them can certainly be cured and corrected with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

It's a powerful, invigorating tonic and a soothing and strengthening nervine; a legitimate medicine, purely vegetable, perfectly harmless, and carefully adapted to women's delicate needs. At the two critical periods in a woman's life—the change from girlhood to womanhood, and, later, the "change of life"—it is a perfectly safe and an especially valuable remedial agent that can produce only good results.

For all "female complaints," irregularities, and weaknesses, "Favorite Prescription" is the only remedy so unfailing and effective that it can be guaranteed. If it doesn't benefit or cure, in every case, the money will be refunded.

TEXAS DEMOCRATS.

They Will Hold a Session to Discuss the Situation.

Waco, Tex., Nov. 14.—Chairman Matlock of the Clark state democratic executive committee, has called the committee to meet in this city next Saturday. In conversation with a reporter Judge Clark said:

"The separation at Houston was upon principles and I suppose each side is determined to adhere to their respective views. I know that our side is. We parted company with the Hogg people because they have thrown democracy behind them and were pandering to every ism that made its appearance under the governor's teaching.

"The state has been drifting into socialism—not gradually, but rapidly. The question which confronted us at Houston was whether we should rescue the principles of democracy from oblivion or take our places in the ranks of the commune. We chose the former, realizing that the fight would be bitter and prolonged. In truth it has barely begun.

"We are in it to stay and while public office is not our goal, we are bound to win."

PENNILESS AND PENITENT.

A Young Man Gets Away With Five Thousand in a Week.

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 14.—John Hill, until a week ago a street car conductor on the Broadway line, New York, who recently came into possession of $5,000 throught the death of a relative, has lost the entire amount.

He started out last Monday to tour the country and got rid of $1,400 before reaching St. Louis. He fell in with a variety actor and they got drunk together.

The actor got $375 of his fortune and the next day Ed Breeze, a notorious local character, won the residue of the $5,000 shooting craps with Hill. Breeze used loaded dice. Hill is penniless and naturall very penitent.

KILLED HIS BROTHER.

Most Brutal Murder at a Cleveland Wedding.

The Head of a Man Nearly Severed From the Body by a Razor.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 14.—A horrible murder was committed at the residence of Mrs. Mary Murphy, No. 118 Swiss street, Sunday afternoon, while a wedding celebration was in progress, P. F. Murphy cutting the throat of his brother, Wm. J. Murphy, from ear to ear with a razor. Mrs. Murphy's daughter Annie was married Saturday to John J. Kerwith, and a reception was given at her mother's house. A large number of guests were in attendance.

P. F. Murphy, or Frank, as he is called, is a drunkard and of a surly disposition. He locked himself in his room, refusing to mingle with the guests.

When supper was ready W. J. Murphy went to Frank's room and asked him to join the others. Frank refused to open the door and William climbed through the window. What passed between the brothers is not known. In a few minutes Frank came out of the room with his hands and clothing covered with blood, and laid a bloody razor on the table. He went directly across the street to the Swiss street police station and gave himself up.

Upon investigation it was found that William was dead, his head having been nearly severed from the body with the razor. Frank said he killed his brother in self-defense. The murdered man was a freight conductor on the Lake Shore road. He lived at Collinwood, near this city, and had a wife and two children.

SAM'L OF POSEN.

His Second Trial Started in California.

A New Witness Who Will Swear That the Actor Fired the Fatal Shot.

San Francisco, Nov. 14.—The second trial of Maurice B. Curtis, better known as Sam'l of Posen, for the murder of Policeman Alexander Grant, early on the morning of September 11, 1891, was called to-day in the criminal court with Judge Troutt presiding. The jury at the first trial stood eleven to one for conviction on the charge of willful murder.

At that time there was a weak point in the evidence of the prosecution owing to the fact that none of the witnesses for the state would positively swear that it was the actor who fired the fatal shot.

During the past month, however, a new witness has been found in the person of one J. W. Cann, a resident of the interior of the state. Cann says that he saw the scuffle between Curtis and the officer from the opposite side of the street, and that he is positive Curtis shot the policeman twice in succession.

He explains his failure to make himself known at the time by saying that he had purchased a ticket for the next morning's boat, and did not desire to be detained in the city.

The second trial had originally been set for September 26, but a postponement was granted until to-day owing to the fact that in the absence of two important witnesses the counsel for Curtis were unwilling to go on. The counsel for the accused man will make a strong fight for their client.

FIVE WERE KILLED.

Locomotive Explosion on the Reading.

A Switch Engine Scatters Death and Destruction in All Directions.

Reading, Pa., Nov. 14.—A frightful boiler explosion occurred on the Reading road, a short distance above Schuylkill Haven about midnight last night. Five men were killed and several injured. The killed are:

Engineer WM. COWEY.
Fireman WM. MOYER.
Engineer HARRY ALLISON.
Conductor KENDRICK

and another man whose name has not yet been learned.

Michael Dobbins, a brakeman, was badly injured. The engine had just finished making a shift and coupled up to a train. The moment the steam was applied the explosion followed. Cowey was hurled against rocks and every bone in his body was crushed. Moyer was hurled 100 yards away into a field. The others lay near the wreck.

The engine was No. 563 and belonged to the freight trade. On Sunday she was put on the coal trade and at the time of the accident was on her way to Palo Alto. The locomotive is a complete wreck. Cowey and Moyer belonged to another crew and were deadheading it home to Palo Alto. The others belonged to the engine which exploded.

LYSANDER THOMPSON DEAD.

New York, Nov. 14.—Lysander Thompson, the veteran actor, who has been confined in the insane pavilion of Bellevue hospital since the 4th inst., died in that institution last night. He was 50 years old and leaves a widow and three children. He had played many prominent parts in [illegible] produced by A. M. Palmer.

DEPEW THINKS IT A JOKE

That Platt Should Lay the Loss of New York At His Door.

Says He Was Ordered to Keep His Hands Off.

All His Energies Were To Be Expended on the Stump, But He Was Not to Interfer With the Management of the Campaign.

New York, Nov. 14.—When Chauncey M. Depew saw that Tom Platt laid the blame of the republican loss in New York county to him he laughed heartily. He did not read the interview carefully during the day, but took the paper with him to his home at Dobbs Ferry last evening. After dinner he read with more care what Mr. Platt said.

As he read Mr. Depew laughed again. After a while his merriment subsided a little. Then to a World reporter who was with him he said:

"There have been few opportunities in this campaign even for a professional humorist, but the idea of my running the campaign in New York is a colossal joke.

"The difference between Brother Platt and myself is that I regard victories or defeats as dependent principally upon party policies and principles, while he believes they are largely due to candidates and leaders. Brother Platt's diagnosis of the situation at any time is a statement of a born fighter, and generally ends with the throwing of a brick. The inference in this case, of course, is that if Harrison had not been nominated the republican candidate, other than Mr. Harrison, would have carried New York and enough other states to have secured his election.

"My view is entirely different. In my judgment the vote last Tuesday was a revolt against 30 years of protection—a craze for a change, to try the experiment of some form of free trade. No matter who the candidates were, it would not have altered the result, though it might have changed in some cases the figures as to majorities.

"A majority of the delegation from New York county were opposed to Gen. Harrison at Minneapolis, so the argument does not hold that the counties which opposed Gen. Harrison at the convention did better than those which favored him. So far as New York county is concerned the county organization is entirely in the hands of Mr. Platt. I have no voice in its government or management whatever and know perfectly well I would not be permitted to if I had tried it in this canvass.

"The fact is I was distinctly informed by the parties most interested that I must make no attempt whatever to control the machine, either in the city or the state. I might expend my activities upon the public platform or through the press, but any effort to run the management would be regarded as an attempt at party control, as against the gentlemen who were running the machine.

"I was quite content with this because I think I have little talent in that direction. I have not the time, and if I had I doubt if I would be a success at running the machine in New York city or the state in the ordinary sense of the machine running and party management. I was more anxious to elect a republican president than anything else, and was utterly indifferent as to what place was assigned to me either before the election or after the election.

"I must say that the Homestead strike was one of the most difficult things we had to contend with. It created an impression all over the country among the working people that powerful organizations like the Carnegie works were determined to fight organized labor. It is not true that Mr. Frick or Mr. Carnegie contributed to the republican campaign fund. Mr. Frick was mad because the republican managers endeavored to induce Mr. Carnege to interfere to settle the trouble and overrule Frick's judgment. So he refused to contribute anything.

"Mr. Carnegie, when appealed to, refused to contribute a dollar or to come home and vote. At the same time he got the credit of taking an active interest in the canvass. He took no part in the canvass whatever. So we got all the harm possible out of the Carnegie trouble and no good whatever from the Carnegie interests.

The difference in the vote of Westchester county was due to the lamented death of General Husted. The general as a candidate for the assembly always made such a red-hot fight in the Third assembly district that his candidacy was worth a thousand votes to the general ticket.

"The result in Kings county may or may not be ascribed to General Tracy. I think it is more due to the fact, so far as party differences affect the result, that Mr. Nathan was running the machine and Mr. Willis was running the anti-machine. But the management and factions inside the republican party had very little to do with the result. The extent of the disaster demonstrates that it was something beyond the reach of party management, candidates or leadership. It was a deep-seated, unknown and uncontrollable sentiment among the people for a change. Take Ohio, for instance. The 25,000 majority for McKinley as governor last fall was wiped out, and Ohio gave her electoral vote for Mr. Cleveland.

"I want to say for Brother Platt that no man, under the conditions, could have managed the canvass either in the city or the state of New York better than he did.

"I have seen a train of cars running at full speed, under the control of the most alert locomotive engineer, round a curve and smash into a landslide. The engineer was not to blame, and the landslide didn't care who was to blame. That was what it was there for.

"After all I take it that Brother Platt's diagnosis of the situation was more humorous than serious. The situation is so simply awful and hopeless, for the present, that even a chronic humorist finds very great difficulty in scaring up a smile.

"For Brother Platt, with the New York machine absolutely in his hands and running it as he pleased, to charge me with the falling off of the New York vote is a joke at the funeral which relieves the solemnity of the situation and irradiates the gloom of the mourners.

"Mr Platt and I will both serenely watch our democratic friends in their efforts to run the government and satisfy the public craze for reform from republican management. Our lines are quite different in the practical workings of the political world, but the enemy will find us united in the effort to ditch his train when his quadriennial excursion takes place four years from now."

Thomas C. Platt yesterday refused to discuss the report that he had engaged a man to go to Troy and decoy democratic voters on a boat before election, to be kept there until the voting was over. The report said that Mr. Platt was to be arrested on a charge of conspiracy.

"The thing is ridiculous. I won't deign to notice it," was all the defeated leader would say.

PREACHER SHOT.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 14.—Rev. Dr. J. W. Moffat, pastor of the Baptist church in North Danville, and the recognized prohibition leader, who was shot by J. T. Clark, a lawyer and prominent democratic politician last Friday, died Sunday morning at 2 o'clock.

SUICIDE.

Fostoria, O., Nov. 14.—(Special)—The wife of G. L. Berrenger, proprietor of the Hays house saloon, committed suicide by the revolver route.

GERMANY'S EXHIBITS.

Professor Koch Says They Will Not Bring Cholera to America Even If They Do Pass Through Hamburg.

Berlin, Nov. 14.—The sending of Germany's exhibits to the world's fair by the way of Hamburg is said to have caused no little uneasiness among some persons at Chicago. It is feared, letters received here say, that in this manner cholera germs may reach the Garden City. In view of the gravity of of the question, the Associated Press correspondent thought it wise to ascertain the extent to which these fears were justified. Privy Councillor Wermuth, imperial German commissioner to the world's fair, told the Associated Press correspondent that it was true that most of the German exhibits were sent by way of Hamburg. He said that it was the most direct and convenient way, and that there was no danger whatever. Prof. Koch at first declined to talk, as he is opposed on principle to newspaper interviews. He referred the correspondent to the publications of the imperial health office, of which he is a member. But finally, however, in view of the interests involved, he consented to be interviewed. "It is out of the question," said he, "that goods or merchandise passing through Hamburg should carry cholera germs. It has never been known that new goods carried such germs. Cholera may be spread by human beings or by the soiled clothing or linen of cholera patients, but never by goods packed in wooden cases, by iron or stone. We knew these facts before, and the recent Hamburg epidemic has simply confirmed our opinion that only through contact with infected persons or their clothes could cholera be spread. If Chicago will take the proper steps to keep the people from infected districts awayfrom the fair, she need fear no invasion of that dread specter, cholera, though the German exhibits were carried through Hamburg."

Mr. Johnson, the United States consul at Hamburg, was in Berlin recently, having come here to take his family back to Hamburg—a sign, by the way, that the danger had passed, for the present at least. Consul Johnson told the Associated Press correspondent that not a single package was allowed to leave Hamburg for America without thorough disinfection.

TO MARRY A WIDOW.

Senator Hill Reported About to Take a Wife.

His Sorrows and Joys To Be Shared by a Southern Lady.

New York, Nov. 14.—The Advertiser says this morning: David B. Hill's bachelor days are numbered. When he returns to Washington in December to resume his place in the senate of the United States, it is altogether probable that he will have a partner with him.

Those who keep track of the social life of the national capital have heard all about it. The senator is going to marry. It is said that the day it set, but that part has not got out.

The lady who, it is reported, has won the clever politician's heart, is a southern beauty. Her name is Mrs. Fannie Iverson. Her home is in Atlanta, Ga. Mrs. Iverson is a widow on the sunny side of 30. She reains all of the beauty of young womanhood. Mrs. Iverson can hardly be termed a society woman in the ordinary acceptance of the term, though coming of an illustrious and wealthy family.

Senator Hill's visit to Atlanta, the occasion of his first meeting Mrs. Iverson, was made in company with Gov. Flower and a number of other prominent politicians of New York, to secure the world's fair for this city. A later visit, when the acquaintance was renewed and mutual friends in Atlanta began prophesying that something more would come of it, was made by Senator Hill upon the occasion of the unveiling of Hnery W. Grady's monument last fall.

The senator expressed great admiration for her and she in return did not hesiate to soy the bachelor senator was a delightfully companionable gentleman. Of course, she denied that there had been anything like the popping of the all-important question. Mrs. Iverson has three children, all boys, a snug little fortune, and many friends in the fashionable world.

The senator has a fine home in the suburbs of Albany for which he has no use as an old bachelor. It has been decorated and furnished within the last month, and much taste is exhibited in the selections.

AMOS SHINKLE.

Death of a Well Known Citizen.

He Was Famed the Country Over for His Many Deeds of Kindness.

Cincinnati, Nov. 14.—Amos Shinkle, Esq., the Covington philanthropist, died last night at 9:45 o'clock at the family mansion on Second street in Covington. Only last Thursday he and his estimable wife celebrated their golden wedding, and he then seemed to be in excellent spirits and enjoying the best of health.

About 1 o'clock yesterday morning he was taken ill and Drs. Carson, Thomas and Kelly were called and remained with him until the time of his death.

By the death of Amos Shinkle Covington loses one of its best and leading citizens and a man who has been a public benefactor. To him the people of Covington owe a debt of gratitude that they can never repay.

Mr. Shinkle was 74 years of age. He was born in Brown county, O., of poor parents. When he reached the age of 18 years he said to his father: "I can now make my own living," and left home with just 25 cents in his pocket. He went up the Big Sandy river and floated logs down to Higginsport, O., where they were sawed into lumber at his father's mill. He came to Covington about the year 1846 and went into the coal business. In 1865 he went into the banking business, and established the First National bank. Before this he built the Covington gas works, and was president of the company when he died. He was a prime mover in the building of the Cincinnati-Covington suspension bridge. His estate is estimated to be worth $2,000,000.

OUR OWN JIM CAMPBELL

He Will Live in New York for Six Months.

Will He Then Enter the Cabinet of President Cleveland?

New York, Nov. 14.—The World prints the following special from Columbus, O.: Ex-Gov. James E. Campbell will remove with his family to New York city, December 1st. He has taken a house on Seventy-ninth street. The ex-governor says that the present arrangement is only for six months. He will maintain his citizenship in Ohio and vote in Butler county.

For some years his business arrangements have compelled him to spend a great deal of his time in New York. The enterprise he has now on hand, more than ever demands his presence at the metropolis. Politics has no part whatever in the ex-governor's determination. He was house-hunting in New York last August but could not find a house to suit.

MAUMEE.

Maumee, O., Nov. 14.—(Special)—Miss Nettie Lautzenheiser and Adie Emery were guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Emery in Napoleon over Sunday.

Mrs. F. D. Cram spent Sunday and Monday with relatives at Air Line Junction.

Mr. Hammond, of Cardington, is the guest of his daughter, Mrs. Dr. Kline, this week.

Charlie Perrin accidentally shot himself through the hand last Tuesday.

Mrs. J. A. Mollenkopf, Mrs. Thomas Brown, Mrs. Chas. Rodd, Mrs. S. M. Van Renselaer, Mrs. F. D. Crain, Mrs. T. P. Hinsh, Mrs. J. H. Binkley, Mrs. P. M. Puhl and Mrs. Frank Hamilton spent Thursday with Mrs. L. P. Vosberg in Toledo.

Mrs. H. B. Lautzenheiser spent Tuesday and Wednesday in Toledo.

Mrs. L. E. Webb and children visited Toledo this week, the guest of her sister, Mrs. Chilcote.

SOUNDS A LITTLE FISHY

The Story of a Robbery From Louisville.

A Bold Crime Charged to Safe Agents.

A Bookkeeper Whom the Detectives Think Is Not Entirely Innocent.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 14.—One of the most peculiar robberies that ever took place in Louisville occurred last night at the wholesale branch of the whisky house of E. Hoffheimer of Chicago.

About 9 o'clock A. Goldberg, the agent, was found lying on the floor of the warehouse bound and gagged, while near him stood the safe with the doors wide open and the papers from its drawers scattered on the floor and partly consumed by fire.

The front door was open and all the money in the safe was gone. The detectives were called but could get no clue to the thieves. Goldberg states that he came to the store about 2 o'clock in the afternoon to work on his books.

He locked the front door after him and, opening the safe, took out the books and, laying them on his desk, went to work. Suddenly he felt himself seized from behind and knew nothing more until what he believes to be several hours

Goldberg asserts that he believes the robbers were concealed in the cellar of the store. Knowing his habit of coming down Sunday afternoon and opening the safe, and that as soon as he became absorbed in his books they slipped up behind him and, throwing a towel saturated with chloroform over his mouth, soon had him unconscious; that they then took his watch, shirt stud, and about $120 in money from him and then rifled the safe of $100 and business papers. The detectives, however, intimate that there is something wrong with the story.

They declare that it is almost impossible that Goldberg could have been seized and bound as he says, within 20 feet of a much frequented street and in plain view through the glass front of the house.

Dr. Grant, who was called to attend Goldberg, says the man had not been chloroformed. No motive is known, however, for Goldberg working up a fake, and the matter is left a mystery.

Goldberg is E. Hoffheimer's sole agent here and did a good business both in buying and selling whisky. E. Hoffheimer is a brother of Nathan Hoffheimer, the New York whisky man, against whom there is a case now pending in the United States court on the charge of crookedness in the reimportation of whisky from Bermuda.

BOLD ROBBERY.

A Man Loses Thirty-Five Thousand.

A Whole County on a Still Hunt for the Thief Without a Clue.

Sea Isle City, N. J., Nov. 14.—The whole county of Cape May is greatly excited over the robbery of the residence of Captain Elijah Wheaton, at Tuckahoe, sometime during thae last week. The amount taken was $35,000 in cash.

Captain Wheaon left home Tuesday for a short visit to friends and upon his return discovered that money to the amount of $35,000, which had been kept in a bureau drawer, was missing. Other sums of money in the house were untouched, the thief being satisfied with the first haul. A prominent Philadelphia detective has been at work on the case, but has thus far failed to find the slightest clue to the robber or money.

Members of the family believe that the robbery was committed by someone thoroughly acquainted with the residence and the habits and movements of the inmates. Captain Wheaton is an owner of large shipping interests and is very wealthy. The disappearance of so big a sum of money has caused a sensation in Tuckahoe and everybody is on the still-hunt trying to find the thief.

WALDO SILVA.

Dead Chief of the Late Revolution Buried.

Late News Cabled to the United States From Valparaiso.

New York, Nov. 14.—The Herald's Valparaiso correspondent telegraphs as follows: Waldo Silva, the dead chief of the late revolutionary junta, was buried last night. It was intended to give him an elaborate public funeral, but he requested that there should be no public demonstration when he was buried, and his wishes were respected.

President Montt is hard at work trying to reconcile the opposition to the present cabinet so that it may be retained in office. The opposition is mainly to Barros Luco, the prime minister; but the other members of the cabinet will not retain office if Senator Luco goes. The questions at issue are purely political and will in no way affect the financial prosperity of Chile, as there is every prospect that the bills providing for metallic currency will pass congress.

Telegrams from Rio Grande do Sul say that the revolt there was frustrated by the vigilance of the government troops. In a fight between the police and the conspirators the two sons of Gen. Tavares were killed and Tavares with several others were wounded.

The wife of Gen. Tavares has become insane on account of the death of her sons. Silveira Martin and his party deny having any idea of a revolutionary attempt.

The Herald correspondent at Buenos Ayres telegraphs that the radicals state that they are organized purely for political purposes and have no intention of fomenting a revolution. A big meeting of radicals, presided over by Dr. Alene, was held last night. It was decided to maintain the party. It has been decided to appoint Enrique Moreno, now Argentine minister to Uruguay, as minister to Chile.

THIS MEANS BUSINESS

Democrats Will Teach the People a Trick or Two.

Work on Appropriations Already Commenced.

Chairman Holman Will See To It That Business Is Rushed Through.

Washington, Nov. 14.—Chairman Holman, of the committee on appropriations of the house of representatives, to-day issued a call for the committee to meet in Washington at 12 o'clock November 28.

It is the intention of Chairman Holman to prepare the appropriation bills as fast as possible with a view to securing early consideration by congress.

To this end the clerks of the appropriation committee have already collaborated the rough estimates received from the departments, so that when the committee assembles, work on the appropriation bills can be commenced at once.

It is the desire of Chairman Holman to present and pass several of the more unimportant bills before the holiday adjournment in December.

TERRIBLE FLOODS

Are Sweeping Over the Yellow River Valley.

Half the Population Reported Drowned.

Latest Advices From Peking Show a Fearful State of Affairs.

San Francisco, Nov. 14.—The City of Peking arrived here yesterday, bringing Oriental advices dated Hong Kong, October 19th, Yokohama, 29th, that the Yellow river had broken loose again, inundating the districts of Chang Chin, Chi Tung, Ching Chen, Chang Ghan, Chou Ping, Poa Shing and possibly others, embracing a large area.

The devastation is frightful and the loss of life terrific.

It is said that half of the population have perished.

BIG BASE BALL TALK.

National League to Meet in Chicago.

There Will Be No New Diamond—Efforts to Increase the Batting of the Players.

Chicago, Nov. 14.—On Wednesday of this week the annual meeting of the National league will be held at Chicago. At this meeting, which will be the first annual session of the governing body of the league to be held in the west, there will be considerable important business to transact, the most important of which is the final regulation of players' salaries for next season.

In a financial way the league is in good shape. True, there are two or three individual clubs—New York among them—that are in bad fix in money matters, but the league as a body was never healthier financially. The fact that the league paid $90,000 worth of its notes last season proves this.

There will be considerable tinkering with the playing rules at the Chicago meeting.

The flat bat will probably be done away with altogethtr, and the pitcher will be moved back to make batting freer.

The proposition to make the base ball diamond one of five corners is so ridiculous that no attention will be paid to it.

Sporting Life this week has a new scheme from another correspondent. He suggests that instead of 90 foot diamond as now, a diamond of 93 feet be used and the pitcher moved to the center of it. While this would make batting greater, it would also give the base runner a great advantage. The pitcher would have several more feet to throw the ball to the catcher and the catcher would have to throw it a greater distance to second. True, the runner would have a yard more ground to cover, but he would have all the best of it.

There is nothing wrong with the base ball diamond as at present constructed. Move the pitcher back and the whole problem of more hitting is solved.

If the base ball magnates are really in earnest in their efforts to increase the batting, they can do it by one rule. Let him put the old high and low ball rule in use, and they will see all the batting they want. There are very few free hitters in the country. Give each batter his special kind of ball and you can bank on it he will hit it hard enough to furnish amusement. As the rules now are, a pitcher studies to give a high ball hitter a low ball, and vice versa. If you want better batting give the batter a show for his little white marble.—Sporting editor.

CHARGED WITH MURDER.

Two Illinois Boys Under a Cloud.

They Are Suspected of Having Killed Their Father and Burned Him.

Morrison, Ill., Nov. 14.—The mouder and cremation of M. Swarthout, a wealthy, farmer, has created great excitement throughout the county.

Yesterday Swarthout's two sons were arrested for the crime and it is feared they will be lynched.

Swarthout lived in Lindon township, eight miles south of here. Thursday evening he came to town but did not return here. Search was begun and in the ashes of a straw pile on his farm his partly consumed body was found.

An examination showed that he had been murdered and robbed and the body stuffed in the straw pile. The straw was then set on fire. He was known to have carried a large sum of money.

The evidence pointed to his two sons.

RIOTING IN HOMESTEAD

More Bloodshed in the Big Mill Town.

The Feeling Against Non-Union Men Bitter.

A Free-for-All Fight in Which Many Were Wounded With Flying Bullets.

Homestead, Pa., Nov. 14.—Not since the famous 6th of July have flying bullets been so plentiful as Sunday afternoon. Inside of twenty minutes over fifty shots were fired and Fourth avenue was in a wild state of panic and disorder.

Rumors are plentiful of persons being wounded, but the only ones seriously hurt, apparently, are three strikers, named McFadden, Jones and Pritchard. They have all flesh wounds. Two negroes are also badly beaten.

The fight occurred on Fourth avenue about 4:30 o'clock. Two colored men who work in the mill were walking toward the mill, when they met a striker, who said something to them. They replied and the striker knocked one down. With the same extraordinary suddenness which always characterizes Homestead, so far as the gathering of crowds is concerned, about twenty persons, including women and children, assembled in a few moments. Both negroes fought hard, but stones began to fly and the men were besting them, when one colored man drew a revolver and opened fire.

By this time there were fully 500 persons on the street and the bullets whistling over their heads started a panic. Three men knocked down the second negro, and when he arose he had two revolvers in his hands. He started to run, shooting wildly backward as he did so.

It is said a boy received a flesh wound in his leg, but his name is unknown.

By the time the colored men had reached City Farm lane, six other colored men came along and were assaulted. They all drew guns and ran down Fourth avenue, in the direction of McClure street, near where their lodging house is situated. Some one hurled a brick which hit Washington Paul on the head. He opened fire and so did the others.

In a minute the air was full of bullets, and in front of the colored men there was a terrified crowd rushing into houses for shelter or dodging up alleys. A woman, too frightened to run, stood on the street, and as they passed one of the non-unionists shot at her three times, one bullet passing through her shawl, which she had thrown over her head. Two bullets went through windows of residences and one buried itself in the windowsill of a second-story frame occupied by the Coulter family, who were looking out at the time. While the negroes were running, men, dodging into alleys, would hurl stones at them.

When the colored men reached their house they locked and barred the door. In a minute the house was surrounded by an infuriated crowd, who soon tore down the fence and shattered every window with stones. When the deputies and borough officers arrived some person suggested that they leave the house, and some one yelled: "Let's lynch the negro blacksheep." This was taken up, and cries of "Hang them!" were heard on all sides. The officers went in to arrest the colored men and they found them huddled together in one room, terrified and expecting to be killed. One man, however, was not afraid and said he would be the first to leave. As he was taken out a woman hit him with a frying pan, cutting his head. The deputies tried in vain to keep the crowd away while they took the man to the lockup, but he was hit several times. Stones were also hurled and Deputy Montgomery was struck.

The officers then drew their revolvers and announced that if any more stones were thrown they would have to open fire. A Slav threw a rock which crashed through a window already half shattered. He was arrested, but the authorities seemed almost powerless for by this time over 2,000 persons gathered. Several other colored men were beaten on the way to the lock-up.

About this time another alarming report was circulated through the crowd. It was in effect that the colored non-unionists living on Shanty Hill hearing of the assault upon their brethren in town, were about to come down and rescue them. This was really the case. Over 50 of the colored men were ready to make an onslaught at a moment's notice and the coal and iron police had had much difficulty in restraining them.

Marion Conrad, another non-unionists, owns a house above Ann street on Fourth avenue. During the shooting a large crowd gathered in front of his house and when he appeared began to threaten him. Conrad is sworn in as a deputy sheriff and he stood in his door with a revolver in hand and swore he would shoot the first man who entered the gate. Several deputies then arrived, thus keeping the crowd back for an hour, when it dispersed.

After all the colored men had been removed from the boarding house the crowd subsided and by nightfall no unusual crowds were noticeable.

Peter McFadden, who first engaged the colored man in a fight, was shot through the left arm and cut on the head. James Jones, his friend who came to his assistance in the attack, had an escape from death which was almost miraculous. He had clinched with one of the men who struck him. As he did so the negro shoved his revolver in his assilant's face and fired. The bullet struck Jones in the forehead above the eye, cutting a bloody furrow over the left eye.

Jones and McFadden were arrested last night by detectives. Mrs. Jones attempted to shield her husband and attacked the officers, but was withheld. Of the eleven colored man locked up, seven have cuts on their heads where they were struck with missiles or clubs, John Lewis and Baxter Ford being so badly beaten that a physician was summoned to dress their wounds. Guards are on duty at the lock-up and non-union boarding houses, to prevent any attack.

NO INDICTMENT.

Boston, Nov. 14.—The Suffolk county grand jury reports that it finds no bill against Horace K. Osborne, on the charge of attempting to bribe Representatives Simonds and Morse to vote against the Bennett bill, relating to endowment orders and for the Cape Cod ship canal bill in the Massachusetts house of representatives.

THINK HE WAS CRAZY.

Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 14.—The case of Frank Garvin, who recently shot and killed his wife, Miss Cora Ridpath, on the third day of their marriage, is on the docket for trial in the main branch of the criminal court to-day. The defense will be temporary insanity.

FUNDS GETTING SHORT.

Washington, Nov. 14.—The heavy drain on the treasury on account of the pensions—more than $7,000,000 having been paid so far this month, has reduced the net treasury balance to $28,601,319. Of this $11,344,000 is in subsidiary coin, $11,250,000 is national bank depositaries.

NOMINATIONS.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 14.—At the democratic city convention Wm. K. Potter, Daniel Granger, John H. McGuire and Matthew J. Cummings were nominated for mayor, city treasurer, harbor master and overseer of the poor, respectively. The election will be held November 22.

A STOLEN CHILD.

Lockport, N. Y., Nov. 14.—A decided sensation was created here by the abduction yesterday afternoon of little Lucy Trafford, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Trafford, who were divorced about two years ago.

FOUNDRY BURNED.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 14.—The iron foundry of Carpenter & Sons, in this city, was almost totally destroyed by fire. Loss $25,000; insurance $20,000. A heated casting is supposed to have started the fire.

POISONED MEAT.

Bangor, Me., Nov. 14.—At the boarding house of Cassiday & Thissell's mill, eight persons were poisoned by eating diseased pork this morning. The mill is closed in consequence.

OHIO'S VOTE.

The Republicans Pulled Through by a Slim Majority.

Columbus, Nov. 14.—The latest news from the political headquarters is that Taylor, rep., is elected by 1,054, and Danford, the head of the republican electoral ticket, by 8,728.

Danford runs several thousand ahead of the other republican electors, and Seward, the head of the democratic electors, runs four or five thousand ahead of his colleagues on the ticket.

The general opinion is that Seward will be elected by defeating the elector who receives the smallest number of votes on the republican ticket. The figures received up to date undoubtedly show that the republicans will save their state ticket, elect 22 of the 23 electors and 10 of the 21 congressmen. This was the situation as given out at republican headquarters Saturday night when they closed.

The official returns are still coming in at the office of the secretary of state, but they do not fluctuate sufficiently to indicate that the resuls will be materially different from those which have been given out.

The plurality of Taylor, republican, will not be far from the 1,000 notch.

The democratic committee is doing nothing, but claim the official count will show who is elected or defeated.

Eighteen counties made official returns to the secretary of state Saturday, but three of the counties were returned for correction. This makes a total of 36 counties which have sent in their returns. A comparison of the abstracts with the officials returns sent to Chairman Dick show but slight changes in 11 of the 18 counties. The net gain for Taylor, democratic, was 45, and as nearly half the counties have been received, officially, it can be seen that the fluctuations are not sufficient to cut a very great figure in the result. Deducting the 45 from Taylor's estimated plurality of 1,054 it still leaves him a plurality of 1,000. In the 36 counties Danford's total vote is 113,624 and the other republican electors received 112,795, showing a gain for Danford of 829. Seward, democratic, received a total of 119,996, and the other democratic electors received 119,159, showing a gain of 837 for Seward. This indicates that eight more democrats blundered in voting than republicans.

Carpenter, the head of the electoral ticket of the people's party, received 4,002 votes in the 36 counties, and Redkey, prohibition elector at the head of the ticket, received 8,209. These figures indicate that the people's party has not polled more than half as many votes in the state as last year, and that the prohibitionists have made the least number of mistakes in voting.

JOHN SHERMAN

Talks on the Recent Landslide.

It Was the Carnegies and Fricks That Caused Much of the Trouble —John Will Not Resign.

Washington, Nov. 14.—Senator Sherman was seen with reference to an indefinite rumor that he intended to resign his seat in the senate of the United States. He denied any such intention.

"Do you contemplate writing a book?"

"I have thought of it. I may during the summer engage my leisure thus profitably."

"What is your analysis of the result of the election?"

"It was an overwhelming surprise to me," he said. "Still, the republican defeat is so general I think I see the cause. It strikes me the laboring men took the opportunity to vote against their employers. They saw the evidences of the accumulation of wealth, and thought they were not getting their share of it. The employers in their prosperity should, I think, have increased the wages of labor. The Homestead troubles should never have taken place. Mr. Frick, instead of calling his men about him and discussing fully the conditions existing, acted with a good deal of imperialism. The Homestead troubles thus became the object lesson and every workingman in the country seems to have voted to get even. A recent street-car strike in Columbus was also a frivolous dispute which, with cool-headed managers, ought to have been adjusted before it began."

"Do you think the democratic victory means a long lease of power?"

"No, I think the democratic party will not be able to meet the demands of the general dissatisfaction of the laboring and farming class and in due course of time will be turned out. If you will study the election figures you will find the great cities gave the democratic majorities."

NEW RAILROAD.

The Durango Extension of the Mexican National Opened.

Durango, Mex., Nov. 14.—The Durango extension of the Mexican International railroad, which is owned and controlled by the Southern Pacific company, was formally opened to-day, a distinguished company participating in the inaugural trip. At a luncheon which followed, President C. C. Huntington, of the Southern Pacific, announced that the road would be pushed across the Sierre Madre mountains to the port of Mazatlan on the Pacific coast, and that the work of construction would be rapidly pushed forward with a view to completing the line within the next twelve -month if possible.

DR. JACKSON DEAD.

One of Mark Twain's Celebrated Characters Passes Away.

Chicago, Nov. 14.—Dr. A. Reeves Jackson, of this city, the original of Mark Twain's character "My Friend, the Doctor," in "Innocents Abroad," died yesterday. Dr. Jackson had been ill ten days from the effects of a stroke of appoplexy. He will be interred at Janesville, Wis.

IN QUARANTINE.

Washington, Nov. 14.—Secretary Foster to-day directed that the immigrant steamer Wiemar, from Bremen, be rtained at quarantine at Cape Charles, Md., for 20 days, the baggage of the immigrants disinfected and the vessels thoroughly cleansed. The The Wiemar has on beoard 1,900 immigrants. The health of the vessel is reported good, no serious sickness of any kind being on board, but Secretary Foster says he purposes to strictly enforce the president's order as to quarantining immigrants.

FIRE IN NEW YORK.

New York, Nov. 14.—Fire destroyed the large three-story factory building, 321 to 325 East Sixty-fourth street. The building was occupied by a number of cabinetmakers and a refrigerator and stair builder. The entire loss is $85,000. Only a few of the firms had their property insured. The fire started in the boiler room.

UNDER SAIL.

New York, Nov. 14.—The British steamer Francesco, which arrived at Boston from Hull, reports having passed the missing steamer, England, at 8 a. m., November 9, in latitude 42.29; longitude 58.02, proceeding slowly, under sail.

QUARTER OF A MILLION.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 14.—Harbeck's stores, comprising three large buildings on the water front in Brooklyin, and filled with a large quantity of jute, hemp and cotton, were burned this morning. The loss be fully $250,000.

GOETHE'S VISIT TO CARLSBAD.

His Life Greatly Prolonged.

There is no doubt that the life of the great poet was greatly prolonged by drinking the waters of the Sprudel Spring. In our day we have the Sprudel Spring brought to us in the form of Salt, which is obtained by evaporation from the waters of Carlsbad.

The Natural Carlsbad Sprudel Salt is in no sense a mere purgative, but is an alterative and eliminative remedy which dissolves tenacious bile, allays irritation and removes obstructions by aiding nature. It acts soothingly and without pain, and is, therefore, far superior than pills, purgatives and other remedies. The genuine has the signature of EISNER & MENDELSON CO., Sole Agents, New York, on every bottle.

ANN ARBOR WINS

The Foot Ball Game From the Chicagos.

A Lively Game in Toledo Saturday Described by the Bee's Foot Ball Man.

Toledoans had an opportunity Saturday of witnessing a real game of college foot ball, as real as real college boy and real mud could make it. The game was to have been between the Lehigh University eleven and the University of Michigan team, but the Lehigh boys could not come on account of too many broken legs, arms, split heads and twisted joints, relics of recent games.

Arrangements were made, however, with the Chicago University team, and the game was just as exciting as if the other young steam engines had kept their engagement. As a rule, Toledo don't know much about foot ball, but the town was filled with college students, who made up a thoroughly sympathetic and enthusiastic audience. The game came off at the base ball grounds. There was a generous layer of mud varying from two to four inches in depth. In the center was a nice, soft puddle, about 10 by 12 feet. To the uninitiated the game was played as follows:

Twenty-two players attired in heavily padded pants, coming just below the knee to protect the patella, short leather jerkins, that don't prevent the ribs from being kicked in, arrangements to put on the face when hard pressed, to protect the ossa nase and the superior maxillary, heavy shoes and stockings, and the dress is completed. They wore no hats, as hats would hardly stand up under the strain. Both sides rush for the ball, the first man lands on it driving it in the mud something like that youthful gurrl mumble the peg. Then the rest fall on top and drive him in the mud after the ball. They lay there a minute, to be sure he's stuck and can't get away with the ball. Then they untangle their legs and let the unfortunate man up. He is covered with a nice layer of mud, taking in half his face and hair and has counted one point, or something or other, at least he don't rub the mud off and keeps on playing. At last everyone has had a turn at the mud singly, then they go at it collectively, mindful of the nice soft puddle in the center of the field they move in a wiggling bunch toward it, hover a moment on the brink and then settle down ker splash in the middle, all in a bunch. If they can't find the ball, the game is done and those who had it at the time have to pay the expense. At least tat's the way it looks. Its very exciting anyway.

There w.ere some of the best players in the country on the field Saturday. Stagg, of the Chicago eleven, was the star player with Yale for some five years. Lawrance Grosh, of this city, who played with the Ann Arbor boys, put up a brilliant game. He is one of the best players the team has. He used to play in the high school eleven. Jewett, the colored phenom, of the Ann Arbor's did more than any other player to win the game for the U. of M., for they were victorious, 18 to 8.

The elevens were lined up as follows:

Ann Arbor.	Positions.	Chicago.
Hall	left guard	Smith
C. T. Griffin	center	Rulkoetter
Heninger	right guard	Knapp
W. W. Griffin	right tackle	Allen
Hayes	right end	Chase
Sanderson	quarter back	Raycroft
Grosh	left half	McGillivary
Jewett	right half	Stagg
Dygart	full back	Rapp

The college boys kept up a steady of college yells. The Chicago boys' yell was as follows:

Chicago—Chicago—Chi—ca—go—go it Chica—go it Chica—go it Chicago.

The Ann Arbor yell, which is more familiar in Toledo, is as follows:

U. of M., rah-rah—rah-rah—U. of M.—rah-rah—rah-rah—hoo-rah—hoo-rah—Michigan, Michigan, rah, rah, rah.

It is safe to assume that under the circumstances they yelled it all the way home.

THE BAN REMOVED.

The Sisters of St. Vincent's Orphanage Are Free

To Again Solicit the Assistance of the Charitably Disposed.

During the later years of the life of the Rt. Rev. Bishop Gilmour, the Sisters of St. Vincent's orphanage were deprived, by a decree of the late bishop, of soliciting alms from the chartiably disposed Catholics for the sustanance and maintenance of the orphanage.

Yesterday it was announced in some of the Catholic churches of the city that the ban had been removed by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Horstman.

The removal of the ban gives general satisfaction. The orphanage has been largely sustained by charity, and there have been times when the Sisters have been hard pushed to find food and clothing for th elittle ones.

It was an old established custom in this diocese that an annual appeal be made through the churches for the maintenance of the orphanage and hospital. Bishop Gilmour did not feel kindly disposed towards the Sisters because it is said they refused to turn over their property to him. They were willing to do this, but only on condition that he would assume the heavy debt which hangs over the institution.

The removal of the ban, therefore, restores the Sisters to their rights on the charity of the Catholics of the diocese.

JOLLIFICATION

At Kenton, Next Tuesday, November 15—Magnificent Fireworks in the Evening.

Kenton, O., Nov. 14.—The triumphant democracy of Hardin county will celebrate the magnificent victory achieved throughout the whole country—the east, west, north and south last Tuesday, by holding a great jollification and fireworks at Kenton on Tuesday, November 15.—Ex-Gov. James E. Campbell and other distinguished democrats will be present and make speeches at the opera house.

This will be a great day for the gallant democracy of Hardin county. A monster procession will be arranged to take place, probably in the afternoon, and will be a great feature, as it will, no doubt, have many novel and grotesque features. In the evening there will be the grandest display of fireworks ever seen in Hardin county. Everybody—little and big—will be permitted to make as much noise as desired. It will be a genuine carnival of noise and enthusiasm. Every one is invited to participate and enjoy the greatest demonstration that has ever taken place in our city.

COULDN'T STOP HIM.

Philadelphia, Nov. 14.—At the Lyceum theater last night, George Dixon, the champion feather-weight, attempted to stop Walter Edgerton, the "Kentucky Rosebud," in four rounds, but failed. Dixon had the advantage of the first two rounds, the "Bud" doing little offensive work.

Reliable under all circumstances is Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, the people's friend.

The earth moves.—You can buy a first-class liniment, Salvation Oil, for 25c.

SIX COMETS IN SIGHT.

If One of Them Is Biela's It Is of Extraordinary Interest

Rochester, Nov. 14.—Dr. Lewis Swift, of Warner observatory, saw the new comet last night. This makes six comets now visible in the heavens.

Dr. Swift said: "The comet discovered on the 6th inst. was visible last night. It is a very remarkable comet. I have never seen one like it. It is as round as the sun and its circumferential outlines are as sharp as the limb of Jupiter. It is nearly two degrees south of the great nebula in Andromeda, and is moving very slowly southwest. It is just visible to the naked eye.

Boston, Nov. 14.—The Commonwealth will say to-morrow:

"Advices from the European Union of Astronomers hint at the fact that Prof. Berberich, of Berlin, considers the newly discovered Hollis comet as probably identical with Biela's. This, if substantiated, will be of the greatest interest to astronomers. The comet was originally discovered in 1772 by Montaigne at Limoges. Its periodicity was established by Biela, at Josephstadt, Bohemia, in 1826.

"Its successive appearances were watched with great interest, but its position in proximity to the sun prevented its observation on several of its returns. In 1845 it was seen as a faint neubla and was observed to separate into two portions. On its next return, in 1852, the two companions were discernible, but widely separated, and since that time it has not been seen. In 1872 a stream of meteors was noted, the orbit of which agreed with that of the comet, and an interesting relationship was at once established.

"The possibility that this comet, transformed into a stream of meteors, is once again visible to us as a comet is of exceeding interest an dof value as well, as a step towards the solution of the mystery surrounding these wanderers of the skies."

THE ARCHITECT.

His Profession Is Not One of Ease and Comfort After All.

Mr. N. B. Bacon, the architect, hands the Bee the following clipping from a recent issue of the Cincinnati Commercial-Gazette, which, being so spicy and pat, is given space, the subject of architecture having become one of such very general interest to the people at large:

A friend of mine introduced me to an architect he other day. His name was Frezee.

I said, "My dear Mr. Frezee, I can not imagine a more delightful business than yours. I envy your opportunities for catering to people's refined and aesthetic taste; indeed, it must seem to you an exquisite pleasure to see the plans you picture so fondly rising and materializing into splendid edifices, the dwelling places of wealth and home comfort."

He did not answer me at once. He was busy holding at arm's length a lighted match to the end of a partially cremated cigar, evidently waiting to see if the gas that was raising from it would explode. Finally he decided it was safe, and returning it to the base of his B. primary molers, drew on a cool sight draft expression and spoke these words:

"Well, yes, I'd rather be an architect than go to jail, but if you think people fool around an architect's office showing their artisite taste we hadn't better talk any farther, for I've another and more violent name for it. I had a case in point this morning. A man from Walnut Hills came into the office with a small round package, wrapped in tissue paper and tied with a pink string. He remarked something about having a few little ideas sketched out for a house as he opened the bundle, and when he had gotten it smoothed out it proved to be an ordinary pencil tablet, with a few smeary imitation squares and rectangles, together with other small tracings popularly supposed to represent a house in its earlier stages of incubation. He asked that a set of plans be immediately made from these hieroglyphs, and especially stipulated that the shape and proportions be strictly adhered to. The sketches, he said, had been made by his wife, who had taken great pride in them.

"Now, his wife may have been, and doubtless was, a very clever woman, but a hasty review of her pet plans showed a few trifling impossibilities, nevertheless. In the first place, the house indicated was about a sixteen-room dwelling, while the money on which to base the calculations would, perhaps, comfortably build one of six. Prominent in the first floor arrangement was to be an elaborate hall; but by a small oversight the space she had allowed for the stairway would just about accommodate a ladder, or one of those brass sliding-poles made use of in the fire engine-houses. Another small matter was a room on the second floor. She had first drawn it for 10 by 16 feet, and afterwards changed it to 19 by 28 feet, by simply erasing the first figures and making no allowance for the difference on the ground plan.

"In looking them over together, I intimated to the gentleman that his plans might work if he would have the inside built up first, and run the outside walls around it afterwards. Then he grew sarcastic, and wanted to know if I thought his plans were not going to work out. I told him I thought they possibly might if they could only be left to themselves long enough. Then I suggested that he leave the sketches, and let the office look carefully into their merits. He wouldn't: seemed to be afraid I would steal them and gain a national reputation, exhibiting them at the world's fair.

"Another species, whose funerals do not occur often enough to suit me, are the men who have seen a house a friend has had built for $1,500, and want one 'exactly like it.' Their great stroke is to order hard-wood finish throughout, shower bath, stationary wash-stands, electric connections and a conservatory, and when the bill of expense comes in, and he finds it will lap about twice around his little old $1,500 and tie in a fancy bow-knot, he throws up his hands and declares he was robbed by his architect.

"Young man, I have great respect for you, and I would like to state right here, before the session closes, that if you continue to go up and down the world extolling people's delicate appreciation of nicety, when it comes to building houses to live in, you had better see to it that the majority of the company is not architects, for you may get a chance to make a war record before you are really fixed for it."

HENRY P. SMITH.

Second Trial of the Lane University Professor.

Cincinnati, O., Nov. 14.—Presbyterian clergymen and laymen, as well as representatives of many other religious organizations, crowded the First Presbyterian church this morning to witness the proceedings incident to the second stage of the trial of Prof. Henry P. Smith, of Lane university, on a charge of heresy. This was the day set for the professor to make his formal defense. The proceedings opened with the return of the formal citation, including the charges, specifications and proof. A summary of the charges was as follows:

Charge 1. That Smith taught in articles published in the New York Evangelist of March 17, and April 7, contrary to the rules and regulations of the church, abandoning the essential features of the doctrine of the church.

Charge 2. That he taught in a pamphlet entitled "Biblical Scholarship's Inspiration" that the holy spirit did not so control the holy writers in the holy scriptures as to make their utterances absolutely truthful: that is, free from error when interpreted in their national and intended sense.

Charge 3. That in the same pamphlet, while alleging the holy scriptures are inspired in an infallible rule of faith and practice, he denied in fact their inspiration in which inspiration is attributed to the scriptures by the scriptures themselves, and by the confession of faith.

ELECTION FRAUDS.

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 14.—Eleven arrests have already been made in connection with the alleged election return frauds, and others are expected. A fund has been raised for the prosecution of the guilty parties, and $12,000 has been subscribed, while thousands more are promised.

CROOKED CANADIANS.

Ottawa, Ont., Nov. 14.—Robert Brewer, accountant of the house of commons, and his assistant, Capt. Bolton, have been suspended by Speaker White for irregularities discovered by the audit office in the fund out of which the sessional indemnity of members is paid.

AT THE THEATRES.

Ullie Akerstrom Opens at the People's To-Night.

Mr. Potter of Texas To-Morrow Evening—The Cowboy Pianist at the Wonderland—John P. Rice—The Kid.

Ullie Akerstom opens at the People's this evening for a week, in "Miss Roarer." The latter part of the week "A Little Busybody" will be presented. "Miss Roarer" gives all the scope she requires for her many attainments. Her work throughout is excellent and her graceful and reckless horsemanship calls forth round after round of appiause. The plot of the piece is good and furnishes excellent opportunities to display the versatile talents of the company. There is plenty of spirit in the life of "Miss Roarer." Many startling and effective situations are releived by the interpolation of amusing songs, music and terpsichorian diversities. Miss Akerstrom possesses a slight girlish figure, a bright and animated face, a musical voice and a spirited stage presence. While a capable actress, her special forte is her dancing; in that accomplishment she has achieved great success. She is extremely light and graceful on her feet, as is thoroughly illustrated in the various dances she introduces in her play. In the part of Aurora she introduces her trained horses, and her riding is said to be dashing and graceful. She is said to show a spirit in her equestrianism equal to that of the best circus rider.

A Knotty Affair.

One of the actors in a farce comedy which was produced here not long ago remarked that he didn't see how any elf-respecting person could be guilty of sitting out the performance. This was a candid confession, no doubt, as there is certainly truth in the general verdict of condemnation against farce comedy. Farce comedies for the most part are precious rubbish, but here and there are bright exceptions, and "A Knotty Affair," which comes to Wheeler's Wednesday evening, is one of these welcome exceptions. It appears from the press notices which this —satirical farce has received throughout the country that "A Knotty Affair," wonderful to relate, contains a plot, a number of well-drawn characters, and it acted by a company of which the chief member is John C. Rice, George Monroe's funny partner, and which is apparently one of the strongest companies ever organized for the interpretation of comedy. Mr. Rice has a character which is eminently well suited to his peculiar abilities, and he has several opportunities to fling the light fantastic. One of these latter saltatorial climaxes is called "The Atmospheric Glide," in which Mr. Rice is said to come near to the speed as well as the elegant agility of the swallow. The whole company is composed of some of the brightest comedians in the country, including the noted soubrette, Miss Sallie Cohen, whose dancing and singing have won her a world-wide fame. The veteran manager, Mr. Harry Sloan, who is favorably known in connection with the famous Hanlon Bros., is, of course, a great advantage to this company. Mr. Sloan promises that the scenery and costumes shall be simply "out of sight," and it may be reasonably expected that the performance of "A Knotty Affair" will be one of the most enjoyable of the season.

Mr. Potter To-Morrow Night.

"Mr. Potter, of Texas," will be presented at Wheeler's to-morrow evening.

It is a pleasing story pleasantly told; it mingles a breath of the exhilarating breezes of the wide spreading prairies of the "Lone Star" state with the perfumed air of the drawing room of the English aristocracy; it tells a story of the love and disappointment of Lady Annerley, a petted daughter of England's most exclusive society; it tells the story of the love and happiness of our true, noble, outspoken American girl; it tells the story of the Hon. Samson Potter, of Texas, who was scalped by the Comanches; his rough, open-hearted, quaint and humorous ways; it tells the story of a Scotland Yard detective and his dog, Snapper; it tells the story of a ticket-of-leave man unjustly confined in the penal colonies of Australia; it tells the story of one high in society and affairs of government, who was at one time a bank defaulter. Taken all in all, "Mr. Potter, of Texas," is one of the greatest plays of the day.

The Cowboy Pianist.

There will be plenty to see at the Wonderland this week. Babel, the cowboy pianist, who until three years ago never saw an instrument, will be the leading attraction in the curio hall. A good performance will be given in the theater. The Wonderland is a pleasnant place to spend a few hours in the afternoon and evening, and Toledoans are rapidly finding it out.

The Kid Coming.

Saturday evening The Kid will be presented at Wheeler's by a large and strong company. The piece has made a big hit in the east.

CHASING A WOMAN.

Montreal, Nov. 14.—The notorious American forger and confidence woman, Mrs. Annie M. Murphy, for whose capture numerous rewards are offered, has been traced to this city. Detectives are now busy trying to locate her. The last crime for which she is wanted was committed on October 27, when she victimized the First National bank and German American National bank at St. Cloud, Minn., by cashing forged drafts for large amounts.

MONTT A DIPLOMAT.

Paris, Nov. 14.—A dispatch from Santiago, Chile, says that President Montt has succeeded in inducing the cabinet ministers to withdraw their resignations. Notwithstanding the denials and reported difficulties between the Argentine Republic and Chile, it is well known here that considerable animosity exists between the two countries.

FAILING GAS FIELDS.

St. Marys, O., Nov. 14.—(Special)—The natural gas fields of Ohio are failing rapidly, and especially is this true of this field, which in its day was the most prolific ever opened.

Both Had Eczema

In Its Worst Form

After Physicians Failed, Hood's Sarsaparilla Perfectly Cured.

Great mental agony is endured by parents who see their children suffering from diseases caused by impure blood, and for which there seems no cure. This is turned to joy when Hood's Sarsaparilla is resorted to, for it expels the foul humors from the blood, and restores the diseased skin to fresh, healthy brightness. Read the following from grateful parents:

"To C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"We think Hood's Sarsaparilla is the most valuable medicine on the market for blood and skin diseases. Our two children suffered terribly with the Worst Form of Eczema

for two years. We had three physicians in that time, but neither of them succeeded in curing them or even in giving them a little relief. At last we tried Hood's Sarsaparilla and in a month both children were perfectly cured. We recommend as a standard family medicine, and would not be without it." MR. and MRS. M. M. SOLLER, 1412 2nd Avenue, Altoona, Pa.

The St. Andrews free lecture course begins in Grace church on Tuesday, November 15, at 7:30 p. m., when a spicy, energetic, story telling, wide-awake talk will be given by Rev. J. W. Sykes about the late great St. Andrew's convention in Boston, the largest and ablest religious gathering of laymen ever convened in America. Other leading speakers are engaged for this course at intervals of two weeks. Sociable before and after the lectures. The general public is cordially welcome.

One of the many pretty weddings of the past week was that which occurred Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. O. P. Vandeburgh, when her daughter, Miss Minnie, was united in marriage to Mr. Herbert M. Zeluff, Rev. Emory W. Hunt performing the ceremony. The bride was attended by her little niece, Miss Marguerite Boles, and Miss Orlean Boles, a little lady of six summers, played the wedding march. The bride was charming in a traveling dress of dark green cloth, with leather colored trimmings, the groom being attired in the conventional black. Following the ceremony the guests, who were the immediate relatives and intimate friends of the contracting parties, partook of an elegant wedding dinner, after which Mr. and Mrs. Zeluff left on the 5 o'clock train for their wedding trip in the east. They were the recipients of many beautiful presents, which show the high esteem in which they were held by their many friends. Upon their return, Mr. and Mrs. Zeluff will be at home at 543 Lincoln avenue, opposite Lincoln place.

Daughters of Rebekah.

The Daughters of Rebekah are aranging for an entertainment and hop to be given at Odd Fellows Temple Tuesday evening, November 22. A musical program will be given by the best local talent.

Temperance Mass Meeting.

The German temperance mass meeting to be held in the Segur avenue church this evening, will no doubt be largely attended.

The program, which has been printed in the Bee, is calculated to interest old and young.

Chrysanthemum Carnival.

On Thursday evening an entertainment will be given by the W. F. M. S. of St. Paul's M. E. church, which will doubtless be largely attended.

It is called a chrysanthemum carnival, in addition to which a delightful musical will be given.

A Merry Time.

The eleventh anniversary of St. Martin's branch, No. 194, C. K. of A., was celebrated by the members Saturday evening at St. Mary's hall.

The hall was beautifully decorated and the banquet was sumptuous.

Speeches were made, songs sang and a general good time enjoyed.

Trinity Musical Services.

A large congregation listened to the beautiful song service at Trinity last evening, and also to a stirring address from Rev. Scadding.

The song services are growing rapidly in interest, bringing out a large number of the young people of the church.

Prof. Fisk to Lectnre in Toledo.

No. 63's Officers.

Typographical union No. 63 at its meeting yesterday elected the following officers: E. C. Griffith, president; Charles F. Holden, vice-president; W. Currans, recording secretary; George Magrane, financial secretary; T. Rooney, treasurer; F. Hitchins, segeant-at-arms.

The Local Jollification.

The committee on arrangements for Lucas county's jollification cannot complete the details in time to allow of celebration Tuesday night, as announced in the Bee. Another meeting of the committee will be held to-morrow to fix the time and what form the "jolly" will take place, and a full attendance is desired. Make it a whooper.

Going to Chicago.

C. T. Wight, of the B. & O.; H. J. Booth, of the Wheeling; W. S. Weed, of the Clover Leaf; A. E. Billings, of the Lake Shore, and Hudson Fitch, of the Ohio Central, leave to-night for Chicago to attend the first meeting of the Central Traffic association that has been held for nine weeks. Many matters of importance will come up.

They Want Mr. Sloan.

At a meeting of the members of the First Baptist church held yesterday after the services, it was unanimously decided to request Rev W. H. Sloan to withdraw his resignation.

Mr. Sloan has not yet decided what course he will take, but it is understood that he will probably remain.

That Clover Leaf Matter.

A joint meeting of the preferred and common stockholders of the Toledo, St. Louis & Kansas City Railroad company is being held at the general offices of the road in this city this afternoon for the purpose of coming to some amicable solution of the differences existing between them.

The Week of Prayer.

The week of prayer for young men commenced yesterday, and was observed in all the churches. To-night in the Y. M. C. A. parlor the first of a series of six gospel meetings for young men will be held. Rev. A. E. De St. Dalmas, of St. Catharines, Canada, will speak. All young men wishing to spend a profitable evening are cordially invited to attend.

The Toledo Cadets.

The Cadets have decided not to give the Mascotte at ther Cartridge Box on account of the difficulty in mounting the three acts. An operetta, Penelope or Chalks, the Milkman, will be given instead. It is a very funny skit, dealing with the loves of a servant girl who has a soldier, a policeman, and the milkman on a string. It is an English piece and full of good music.

"Mickey" Shea at Home.

John J. O'Shea, of this city, who is a page in the house of representatives at Washington, but who, during the campaign, was Chairman Harrity's right bower in New York, is at home for a few days as large as life. "Mickey," as he is known, is chock full of democratic enthusiasm, and says it is all day with the republicans for all time to come.

Bowling Green's Democratic Jollification.

The democrats of Bowling Green and Wood county will jollify this evening over the great victory achieved last Tuesday. Congressman Ritchie, Mr. Frank E. Wright, Mr. M. M. Eppstein, and others from Toledo will attend. Mr. Wright placed Mr. Ritchie in nomination at Bowling Green and will undoubtedly have some pleasant things to say on the happy results.

The Coal and Our Business.

At the general offices of the Ohio Central lines it was learned this morning that the road's lake coal business will close down about December 1. Last season it ran until December 15. The coal business this year has been much larger than last and the ore business at the Toledo docks has just doubled. Coal is still moving lively and enough cars to handle the business cannot be had.

Toledo Passenger Agents.

The railroad men and those residing throughout the state on the lines centering at Toledo, are anxious to know what the rates to the world's fair will be. They will know soon. All the general passenger agents in Toledo were notified this morning to meet in Chicago November 21, when the matter will be taken up. The passenger agents will be given a ride to the grounds in the afternoon on a special on the Illinois Central railroad.

Success to You Dr. Graves.

Will S. Graves, one of Toledo's prominent young men and recognized as a thorough dentist, has established a dental parlor in the Worthington block, where he will be pleased to receive all of his old friends.

Dr. Graves was connected with the dental firm of Barber & Kline for five years, afterwards graduating from a Chicago college of dentistry. He is prepared to honestly claim a share of public patronage in his profession.

A Great Labor Meeting.

The Central Labor union's open meeting committee met yesterday and received assurances of the coming of Mr. W. Z. McDonald, state inspector of workshops and of Rev. Mr. Sawyer, of Tiffin, to deliver addresses at Memorial hall on the evening of the 22nd inst. On the same occasion Mr. T. J. Morgan, of Chicago, will speak, and Mrs. M. E. Dutton, of this city, will deliver an address on the labor question from a woman's standpoint. Music will be furnished by the Silver Quartet and Mrs. Harris of Bryan, the blind singer, and Mrs. Elizabeth Mansfield Irving elocutionist, will recite some of her finest selections. The admission will be free to all and everybody is invited.

Word From M. C. Warn.

A letter received in the city to-day from Mr. M. C. Warn, gives the information that he is doing well, and is making diligent effort to settle up his debts. Toledoans will be glad to learn of this fact, and will wish him the greatest success.

A New Carpenters' Union.

At a meeting in Weber's hall on Saturday night the names of eleven East Toledo carpenters were subscribed to an application for a charter for a union on that side of the river, and the application with the necessary collateral, has been sent forward. It is expected that the charter will arrive in time for the organization of the new union by election of officers, next Saturday night. The prospects are good for a fine union in East Toledo, where live and work about 150 carpenters, who have been difficult to get into Union No. 25. The few East Side members of that union will no doubt go into the new one as soon as it is organized, and give it the benefit both of their number and experience.

M'LEAN DYING.

The Projector of Glassboro Lying Very Low.

Mrs. McLean, wife of C. W. McLean, writing from Ashville, N. C., to a friend here to-day, says that her husband continues to be very near death's door.

Mr. McLean was the projector of Glassboro, and to many who hold as securities Mr. McLean's life insurance policies the news will be interesting.

EAST SIDE BICYCLE WORKS

To Be Established on the Line of the Belt Railroad.

The Bee on Saturday gave the particulars of the proposed bicycle and metal wheel company on the East Side.

The project is a success, and the works will be located on the Belt railroad, near Starr avenue.

AN OYSTER SUPPER

To Be Given by the Gentlemen of the Washington Street Church,

The gentlemen of the Washington Street Congregational church, have resolved to reverse the leap year privileges, and on Wednesday evening, they will give an oyster supper and entertainment in the church parlors.

The cooking and serving of the supper will be done entirely by gentlemen, and they will also furnish the entertainment.

Everybody is invited to come and see what men can do in the line of domestic work, and surprises of various kinds will probably be the order.

DECISIONS.

Judge Pugsley Hands Down Several of Them,

In common pleas court to-day Judge Pugsley handed down decisions as follows: Sayless vs. Bause, an action to recover damage for non-performance of agreement to leave premises, was dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

Climax Tag company vs. Toledo Machine & Tool company, suit to recover money paid on a machine. The demurrer to the petition was overruled.

Bassett, trustee, vs. Browning, suit to recover damage to land for cutting timber, demurrer to the petition was sustained.

SUCCESSFUL SERIES

Of Meetings Closed at the Bartlett Street Church.

The revival meetings which have been in progress at the Bartlett street church for the past six weeks, closed last night.

The meetings have been conducted by Evangelist B. C. Black and Rev. McDonald, assisted by the blind vocalist, Miss Jennie Harris.

Yesterday, beginning at sunrise, an all day praise service was held.

The result of Rev. Black's work has been 110 converts.

He has made many warm friends among the church people of Toledo, as has also Miss Harris, whose sweet voice has touched many hearts.

The additions to the Bartlett street church are very encouraging to both pastor and people.

PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS

Made at the Meeting of the Woman's Building Company.

A small number of ladies met in the Bee editorial rooms last Saturday afternoon, the occasion being the semi-monthly meeting of the Woman's Building company.

It seems to the few workers, who have been endeavoring to dispose of sufficient stock to warrant the erection of a $25,000 building, that for the present at least, such a thing is hardly possible, and several practical suggestions were made among them—a proposition to rent large and roomy quarters, and then when the Toledo clubs shall have demonstrated their willingness and ability to pay rent, it will be time to think of a permanent home.

Of the numerous clubs in the city, few pay rent, indeed many of them pay no dues, or when they do, they are too light to admit of any room rent being paid, and yet they are in a flourishing condition, and could be made much more helpful if they had the use of permanent quarters.

Most of the clubs realize this and have signified their willingness to rent rooms—if the rent is within their reach. By renting a house at a reasonable price, the company can ascertain just what sum is within the reach of these clubs.

The proposition met with general approval, and the chair named Mrs. Claude Q. Murphy chairman of a committee of three to find out what suitable quarters can be rented for, and report at the next meeting, which will be held in the office of the Woman's Recorder, Worthington block, corner Superior and Adams streets, Saturday afternoon, November 26, at 4 o'clock.

NOTEMAN'S GAS MACHINE.

How Gas Is Easily Made From Petroleum.

Alonzo Noteman has received the patent for his apparatus for making gas, mention of which machine has already been made in the Bee. The specifications state that it is a process whereby the gaseous product of crude petroleum is removed there from, and the heavy oil retained intact. The apparatus is very simple. From a tank of crude oil descends a pipe with a nozzle and a cock or valve for regulating the flow. The nozzle end of this feed pipe enters the fore (closed) end of a larger pipe, the upper branch of which leads to a gas receiver, and from the bend of which descends a pipe to carry off the heavy oil, which is thus saved for useful purposes. The lower branch of the larger pipe, between its fore end and the nozzle of the feed pipe inside has an opening surrounded by a flange, by which it communicates with a box below. This box has a series of perforations for admitting air to a burner fixed just below the air-holes. The mingled air and products of the combustion of this lower frame is thus concentrated within the flange and upon the feed-pipe, and at a heat of 170 degrees mingle with the vaporized oil, the gaseous products are removed and ascend through the upper branch to the gas receiver, while the heavy oil descends to the tank prepared to receive it.

The gas thus produced can be conducted to any place, either for heating or lighting. It burns without odor, and the inventor claims that there is absolutely no danger of explosion. He proposes to fit a tube from the receiver to the bottom of the generator, so that after the first lighting the machine can be run by its own gas. It requires but four minutes to start the machine to producing gas for a fire in a stove.

THE BOWER CASE.

It Has Been Continued for One Week.

As was announced in the Bee Saturday, the Bower case was fixed by Probate Judge Millard for trial at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

J. H. Southard represents Mr. Bower, and is engaged in the Manchester trial. In view of this fact the court continued the hearing until one week from Tuesday.

For the grading of Moore street, from Neberry street to Stickney avenue, the tender of James H. Horan was 33c for grading and $24 for lumber; M. M. Goulden, 28c for grading and $23 for lumber; S. Welover & Son, 18c for grading and $28 for lumber; and Wm. McMahon, 27c for grading, $30 for lumber and 70c for 12-inch pipe.

For grading Yondota street, from First street to the Lake Shore railroad the tenders were: O'Sullivan & Crilly, grading 23c and lumber $26; P. A. Garrigan, grading 23c and lumber $25; James A. Horan, grading 24c and lumber $24; S. H. Bodette, grading 27 and lumber $30; M. M. Goulden, grading 23 3-4c, lumber $24, sewer pipe 75c and trees $1 each; W. T. Ryan, grading 22c and lumebr $25; Geo. Welover & Son, grading 17c, lumber $28 and pipe 65c.

For grading Franklin avenue, from Tracy to Owen street: O'Sullivan & Crilly's bid was 32c for grading and $26 for lumber; S. H. Bodette's 25c for grading and $30 for lumber; M. M. Goulden's, 23c for grading and $24.50 for lumber; W. T. Ryan's 25c for grading and $25 for lumber; and Geo. Welover & Son's, 18c for grading and $28 for lumber.

For the paving of George street, from Cherry to Walnut street, there were bids from James Horan, George H. Bodette, W. H. & J. J. Leith, Wm. McMahon, H. P. Strecher and I. & I. C. Wernert. They all contained a multiplicity of items for different kinds of material and extras, on which the engineer will have to figure for some time. A couple appeared to be very close.

DUKE OF MARLBOROUGH.

A Pleasant Day for the Funeral in London.

London, Nov. 14.—The sun shone brightly to-day as the late duke of Marlborough was borne to his last resting place at Blenheim. Lord Randolph Churchhill, the duke of Abercorn, brother of Albertha, the divorced wife of the late duke, and Lord Londonderry, who was always very friendly to the deceased nobleman, were present.

The marchioness of Blandford, the divorced wife of Marlborough, was not there, the duke of Abercorn being assumed to represent her. The duchess of Marlborough wore deep mourning and she was deeply veiled. She seemed entirely overcome and her appearance verified the statement that she had been prostrated with grief since the death of the duke.

The services were those of the church of England, the vicar of Woodstock officiating. There was a large attendance of gentry and tenantry from the surrounding country and they testified by their evident grief to the popularity of the late duke among his neighbors. A number of the personal and business friends of the duke were also present. The report that the duchess will be a serious loser by the improvements at Blenheim is not correct.

The facts are that last December the duke, upon his own application obtained permission from the court to sell a portion of the Blenheim property, not being a part of the lands included the parliamentary grant to the first duke and his heirs, to raise the sum of £20,000, in order to pay for permanent improvements effected in Blenheim palace and the gorunds surrounding it. This permission was undoubtedly obtained with the view of remunerating the duchess for money advanced.

OUR FOREIGN MINISTRY.

A New York Paper Comes Out in Favor of Its Abolishment.

New York, Nov. 14.—The Herald will tomorrow advocate the abolition of our foreign ministry. In the course of its article the paper says: "Some day a great political party will take up this question seriously and make itself famous by wiping our useless and cumbersome diplomatic service from the face of the earth. It was the prophetic voice of James Gillespie Blaine which uttered this prediction, some years ago, to then Congressman McAdoo, of New Jersey. Nearly $400,000 is spent in the empty trappings of useless office. More than a third of a million dollars each year is expended by the United States that its black cloth men may dangle at the tail of a diplomatic kite. The question of abolishing the diplomatic service and substituting a perfect consular service in its place has long been favorably considered in democracy-loving minds. But it was not alone democratic minds which favored the step. Luminous minds in the republican ranks echoed the wish to see the great official Don Quixote unhorsed. Will the democratic party see its opportunity and win lasting fame?"

UNDER LOCK AND KEY.

It is the Custom in Brazil to Keep Maidens in Hiding.

Bigg Wither, an English engineer, who was employed some years in railroad surveying in Brazil, tells some interesting experiences among the landed proprietors. Being a man he had a better opportunity than I to know how women deport themselves in the presence of the other sex. Let me note a few paragraphs pertaining to a visit he made in the valley of the Ivahy.

Senhor Andrade was an old man, and allowed his wife to do most of the talking for him when she was in the room. One of her questions was to know whether I was married, and on hearing that I was still in the fulll enjoyment of freedom, she proceeded to enlarge upon the delights of married life, at the same time informing me that she had five unmarried daughters. After this pretty broad hint of what was expected, of course I expressed a wish to make the acquaintance of these fair members of the family. Her face became suddenly grave. She looked hesitatingly at her husband, who had remained silently puffing his cigarette during the conversation; and he said something which I did not understand, but which at once dispelled her momentary gravity. The old man got up, went across to a locked door, turned the key, opened it, and dispappeared into a dark chamber within. Almost immediately he returned, saying: "The girls are not accustomed to seeing strangers, and are afraid." Meanwhile the senhora who evidently now determined that her daughters should show themselves, had disappeared into the secret chamber, from which now proceeded sounds of whispering and suppressed giggling. Presently the senhora reappeared, leading a very modest-looking damsel of about 19 years, closely followed by three others, apparently somewhat younger. All were overwhelmed with intense shyness and a hysterical desire to laugh. After a formal and separate introduction to each—he noted that the lady is here introduced to the gentleman—they all scampered back into the secret chamber, and their papa turned the key on them. At this time I was ignorant of the custom which is so general in these out-of-the-way parts, of keeping women, or rather daughters, of the family locked up like wild beasts; consequently I did not hesitate to express my wonder and asked why it was done in this case. In answer, Senhor Andrade said that it was the custom of the country, and he had never thought of bringing up his daughters in any other way. "Do they ever go out?" I asked. "No, never," he replied, "not now that they were grown." They had learned horseback riding when children, but since they had been shut up in the house, according to the custom for girls, where they must remain until husbands can be obtained for them. Poor things! It is to be hoped that there are few old maids among the lasses of Brazil.—N. Orleans Times-Democrat.

HE DISLIKED TROUBLE.

"I see by last night's paper that a Mrs. Morgan was run over by a street car," he remarked, as he seated himself on the edge of a chair.

"Yes," replied the city editor. "What of it?"

"I wanted to get some more particulars. Was she busted up pretty bad?"

"Her back and both legs were broken and one arm was cut off short."

"You don't say! Did she seem to mind it much?"

"Well, I should smile," said the city editor. "It killed her."

"Don't tell me so! What do you think they did with her?"

"Oh! They took her to the morgue. I reckon she's there yet. Did you know her?"

"From the description I take her to be my wife. You say she's dead?"

"Yes, sir. I am very sorry for you, but you will have a good claim for damages against the company."

"I shan't trouble 'em. I'm willing to let it drop. Did you get an idea that the car was injured much?"

"I think not. I guess your wife got the worst of it."

"And they can't come back on me for anything?"

"Certainly not. You can make 'em pay."

"Oh! I don't care about that. It's all right as it is, if they don't try to make me trouble. I was a little startled at first, but this lets me out."

"Shall you take your wife and bury her?" asked the city editor.

"I don't know; would you?" asked Mr. Morgan, doubtfully.

"Yes, I think I would."

"I suppose I might as well. It'll save talk, and the easiest way is the best. I hate any fuss, but I reckon I'll have to let up this time and take it. Just say that the funeral will come off next week or the week after, and come up yourself. Let's see. Where'd you say they stored her?"

"At the morgue."

"Well, I'll drop around in a day or two and get her. Much obliged to you for your trouble, and if the company says anything about it, you just say that I don't want any difficulty and I'll fix up any damages, will you? They needn't do any lawing about it. I'd rather patch it up quietly. Have you got a match?"

And Mr. Morgan lighted his cigar and, sauntering into the job room, glanced over the theatrical posters to see what was going on in the amusement line next week. —Texas Siftings.

ZOLA'S SUCCESS.

Zola is said to have netted £44,000 by the publication of 14 volumes of his works. He is supposed to have gained, reckoning both authors' and translators' rights, about £52,000 in 20 years. Over 120,000 copies of his latest work, "The Downfall," are said to have been sold. His new book, "Docteur Pascal," has been sold to a French newspaper for £1,400—the highest price ever given for the serial rights of a novel in France. It means that he will receive about 1s. 3d. for every line of seven words he produces during the next two months.

It is a condition, not a theory, that confronts the republican party.

There will be no more conferences of the postmasters for the good of the service.

The wheelbarrow riding and other nonsensical bets are having their run of fulfillment.

A good democrat reminds the Bee that President Cleveland retired the republican party into "inocuous disuetude."

Republican papers are engaged in an united demand for one-term presidents, which is largely another one of their afterthoughts.

Up to this hour not a syllable of regret has been publicly expressed by the Honorable Jacob Romeis over the defeat of Mr. Ashley. Can a reason be guessed?

This week will be spent in democratic jollification meetings all over the country. Surely no one can object in the least a little hilariousness over the great victory.

No more of Raum in the pension office at Washington after March 4, and as a consequence the newspapers will have a column or two to devote to other matters.

Senator Hill's newspaper organ has proclaimed Edward Murphy, of Troy, as his colleague in the United States senate, to be elected by the New York legislature this winter.

As Gov. Ashley thought the reasons for his election to congress lay in the dim recesses of the past, what wonder that he seeks for causes of his defeat in the same musty labyrinth?

Capt. P. H. Dowling has given much time and attention to the duties of workhouse trustee, and his reappointment by Mayor Emmick is a deserved compliment. Capt. Dowling will undoubtedly be unanimously confirmed by the common council.

Massachusetts republicans are playing the baby act, signing up petitions for a recount, with the expectancy of preventing Governor Russell from retaining the gubernatorial chair. Some people have difficulty in learning when they are licked.

Frank Hurd, ex-Governor Campbell and Larry Neal are leading in the gossip as to cabinet possibilities, if Ohio is called upon to occupy one of the high offices. There is much excellent material within the Buckeye state's borders for any place under the sun.

The republican press will not give great publicity to the rapid and satisfactory advance in cereals all over the country. Farmers are already reaping some of the advantages promised them in the event of Mr. Cleveland's election, and there are yet many good things in store.

Congressman Ritchie will this evening visit Bowling Green, at which place he was nominated, and relate in a degree how he feels on the subject of democracy and victories, individual and general. Hon. L. C. Cole will also speak on the topic, "How it goes for an Ohio democrat to vote in the electoral college."

Harrison is somewhat spiteful over his defeat toward his leading party associates. McKinley is inclined to be sulky. The president bitterly rails at the men who conducted the campaign, while the governor of Ohio maintains a studied silence that is wonderful in a man who is so fond of giving his views to the public.

Will there be an extra session of the newly elected congress? The senate usually convenes to confirm appointments, but the question as to whether the house of representatives will be called together is being variously discussed, with the chances in favor of a meeting on the 4th of March. This will precipitate the contest for speaker, if there is to be one against Mr. Crisp, several months ahead of the usual of the usual time.

The Boston Herald pays the following well-deserved tribute to the Hon. M. D. Harter, who has just been re-elected to congress in the Mansfield district:

> The re-election of Congressman Harter in Ohio is particularly gratifying. He was put into a district in that state gerrymandered with the purpose of defeating him, but which he has triumphantly carried. Mr. Harter is one of the ablest and most useful members of the present congress, and his services in connection with the currency have been of great value. He is a sound practical legislator in all respects, but his knowledge as regards the currency has not been surpassed by that of any member of the house, and he has been as fearless as he has been able in the manner in which he has employed it.

The correspondent of the Cincinnati Enquirer makes the following discovery in the secretary of state's office, showing something as to the manner in which the country is going to the demnition bow-wows because of Cleveland's election:

> "On the 9th of November, the day following the election of Cleveland, articles of incorporation were filed in the secretary of state's office for new manufacturing enterprises, whose aggregated capital stock amounted to $585,000. On the second day after the election of Cleveland new manufacturing corporations were authorized, with aggregate capital stock of $1,405,000. On the third day following the election of Cleveland, new manufacturing enterprises, with capital stock amounting to $1,350,000, were incorporated."

Comment appears unnecessary; the facts speak for themselves.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND.

This is a paragraph on Mr. Cleveland from the New York Tribune, which the editor would not dare print prior to the election, but it is Whitelaw Reid's opinion of the next president, and is now given:

> "We do not believe that Mr. Cleveland will be wanting in purpose. He is certainly regarded as a man of resolution and readiness. Few have claimed for him any extraordinary measure of ability, but republicans have generally been willing to concede that his perceptions are reasonably clear, his motives generally patriotic, and his nature earnest and strong. He will enter upon this term of office knowing it to be his last, and with a knowledge of the country and an acquaintance with men and affairs which he did not at all possess when he was first elected. If he can be judged by the past, he will appreciate and accept the responsibility implied, not only by the fact, but by the manner of his election, and this is what all citizens who believe in the rule of the majority will wish to see."

ONE FROM CHARLEY FOSTER.

In Secretary Charley Foster's reasons for last Tuesday's storm is found a few lines of interest in this section, which are printed with a view to bringing out the truth on the subject. Fostoria's saloons must be doing a rushing business if Mr. Foster's statements are worthy of credence. His conclusions in the last sentence are in keeping with the wild talk indulged in prior to the election, and will have as much weight as such words usually merit. But read the "opinion:"

> "The trouble has been, according to these manufacturers, that the workmen, earning high wages as they do, get into dissolute habits and spend their money at the saloons. Why, in my own town of Fostoria, O., a member of the glass-blowers' union came to me with a statement showing that in one year $155,000 had been spent by the workmen in the saloons there, and he wanted me to show them how many houses and homes could have been secured for that money. Now, the manufacturers' idea is that if the workmen get less money than now, as will surely be the case under a democratic tariff law, they will not have so much to spend on drink and will become more tractable."

Respectfully referred for investigation to our lively neighbor, the Fostoria Times.

THINK OF THE GALL OF IT.

In an interview Mr. James M. Ashley says:

> "The republican party must take no step backward and make fewer mistakes in selecting its leaders. In short, it must reorganize and relegate the boodlers, the spoilsmen and the factional leaders to the rear."

The audacity of this utterance after the boodle campaign just closed and the handsome turning down received by Mr. Ashley caps the climax.

The republican party is dead, Mr. Ashley.

The step backward has been taken, and it was a step that led the party over the precipice of power into the depths of oblivion.

The democratic party has relegated "the boodlers, the spoilsmen and the factional leaders to the rear."

Mr. Ashley is himself a singularly happy illustration of the fact.

'TWAS THE M'KINLEY BILL.

Severe lessons are well learned. Republican leaders and republican journals are admitting frankly that the McKinley bill was a mistake, and the high protective policy of the party is responsible for its overwhelming defeat at the polls. Those who extolled a protective tariff as the height of wisdom, while they thought it could be used to party profit, now that it has failed in that purpose, are willing to not only concede its folly as a party measure, but its mischievousness as an economic principle. Even in its support they contradicted themselves; now in their newly acquired sagacity they flatly deny what they had before enunciated. One of the erstwhile protectionist journals, published not a thousand miles from Toledo, has this chunk of wisdom, though it has for years been preaching protection to the farmer:

> "The prices of grain and cotton correspond the world over, making due allowance for freights and commissions. The world's supply of these staples as compared with the world's demand, fixes the price."

This is just what the tariff reform advocates have been trying to teach the deluded protectionists, and the schoolmaster has evidently been abroad to some purpose.

REVOLUTION IN ENGLAND.

Amid the turmoil which accompanied the constitutional revolution of Tuesday last in the United States, but little if any attention was paid to a political event of almost equal importance that transpired in England.

The tory party in England has within the week past not only changed its platform, but has absolutely reversed it in all of its most important planks. In order to understand the almost unparalleled and decidedly startling departure, it is but necessary to remember that the tory or conservative party has been for hundreds of years all that the latter appellation conveys. It has been so conservative that heretofore the slightest attempt to curtail the privileges and power of the aristocratic or ruling class has sent the party leaders and party organs into convulsions of pious rage. In brief, conservatism, as understood in English politics, has been synonomous with stagnation and retrogression.

At a meeting of the party leaders held in Edinburgh a few days ago the entire party policy was changed, and a platform, frankly and fearlessly democratic, adopted.

The program includes extension of the suffrage to female taxpayers, popular control of the liquor traffic, electoral registration reform, reduction of the period of occupancy to qualify voters, disfranchisement of illiterate voters, state provision for old age, and assistance to workingmen to acquire land for building purposes.

These are a few of the most important planks in the new platform, and the program as scheduled is decidedly interesting, as showing the wonderful strides democracy is making in England.

TOLEDO AND TOLEDOANS.

No One is Sorry.

Lovers of beauty will not be sorry that Ritchie turned Ashley's face to the wall over in the Toledo district.—Fostoria Times.

A God in Israel.

There is a god in Israel. Byron Ritchie was elected to congress in the Ninth district, over Ashley, by 14 plurality.—Fostoria Times.

Close But Enough.

The Toledo district turns out to be the closest in Ohio. The official count gives Ritchie, democrat, 14 plurality over Ashley, republican.—Canton News-Democrat.

Where We Differ.

The republicans of Toledo went back on Gen. Jim Ashley for congress tremendously. They defeated him when they should have given him 1,000 majority.—Dayton Journal, Rep.

With Bull-Dog Tenacity.

Wickham dies hard. The ruling passion is so strong that a club is necessary to make him let go when he can get his hands onto another office.—Norwalk Experiment-News.

Would Have Cut Wickham.

Many a republican more than did would have cut Wickham had it not been the fear of spoiling their ballot. Under the old system, Scribner would have carried Huron county.—Norwalk Experiment-News.

Married at Archbold.

B. F. Wade & Co.'s bright job printer, Earnest Ames, of Toledo, was married Thursday evening to one of Archbold's most respected young ladies, Miss Hattie Gessman. Unremitting happiness and future prosperity is earnestly desired for them.—Fulton County Tribune.

The Price of Hypocrisy Is Defeat.

Ashley, Ridgely and Biggs each owe their defeat to their willingness to adopt any method whatever, regardless of uprightness, to gain a vote. There is honor in politics, and happily there is a keen appreciation of it in the public mind.—North Baltimore Times.

SUICIDE IN NEW YORK.

New York, Nov. 14.—A man who was supposed to be Frederick M. Unger, of 101 Grand avenue, Milwaukee, Wis., was found dead in bed Saturday afternoon in his room in the Broadway Central hotel. He had evidently committed suicide by shooting himself with a revolver that was found beside him.

D. W. COOLEY DEAD.

New York, Nov. 14.—Ex-Judge D. W. Cooley, of Dubuque, Iowa, died of paralysis at the Bath home of his son-in-law, J. P. Douglas, 211 West End avenue, this city.

B. O. MANCHESTER

On Trial in the Common Pleas Court,

Charged With Boodling in the Council.

The Morning Spent in an Effort to Secure a Jury—A Second Venire Necessary.

Councilman B. O. Manchester, from the Ninth ward, is on trial in common pleas court, charged with soliciting a bribe from the Pluto Oil company to influence his official vote on the pipe line ordinance, introduced in the council by the Pluto Oil company.

Mr. Manchester was indicted jointly with seven other members of the city council, and is the third to stand trial. He is perhaps the most popular of the indicted men. He is one of the most prominent republican leaders in both city and county politics. Mr. Manchester was a candidate for nomination as representative last fall and was defeated in the convention. This is his first term in the council, having been elected last spring. He was also chairman of the city committee and was defeated by J. H. Southard in 1891.

Attorneys J. H. Southard and Guy Kinney are conducting the defense.

It was five minutes after 10 o'clock in common pleas court this morning when Clerk Wade called the following names of the regular jurors to fill the panel: E. K. Custard, W. J. Hall, G. W. Hathaway, W. H. Hook, W. D. Jordan, Andrew Nesbit, J. W. Potts, James Pollock, C. A. Rousey, Edward Upton, Fred Van DeBerg, H. F. VanFleet.

Before proceeding with the examination of the jury, Mr. Barber requested the court to appoint Thomas Tracy as assistant prosecutor, which was complied with.

Proceeding with the examination, Mr. Barber made inquiry of William H. Hook. He had not formed an opinion, but had read the papers.

James Pollock had no opinion.

C. A. Rausey was on the grand jury that returned the indictment, and was dismissed on challenge caused by the defense.

The other jurors, in response to questions put by the prosecutor, stated that they had formed no opinion for or against the defendant.

Mr. Southard conducted the examination for the defense and it was thorough and exhaustive.

Mr. Pollock had formed a general opinion as to all who were indicted in the case. He thought he could do justice to Mr. Manchester.

Mr. Southard submitted a challenge for cause, which was overruled.

William Hook had formed no opinion.

Mr. Hathaway had read of the former trials, but had formed no opinion. He had formed an opinion in a general manner, but not relating to Mr. Manchester.

When the defense had concluded the examination of the jury there was one vacancy in the panel. The state demanded a special venire and court adjourned until summons could be served.

When court convened at 2 o'clock this afternoon, Henry Pilliod was called by the clerk to fill the vacancy in the panel. He withstood the examination, and the defense declared itself satisfied with the panel so far as challenges for cause were concerned.

The state then submitted a peremptory challenge against Mr. Custard, who the court then excused.

Benjamin Ranger was next called by the clerk.

The defense exercised its peremptory right and dismissed Mr. Jardon.

Isaac Church was called and claimed exemption as a member of the board of election. He was excused.

Frederick Witker was next called. He claimed to be a member of the board of election, but had not served this fall. As to the guilt of Mr. Manchester Mr. Church stated that in his opinion Manchester was guilty if the others were. The defense submitted a challenge for cause, which was sustained and Mr. Church was dismissed.

The state will begin introducing evidence in the case to-day, and it is expected that new features in the way of testimony will be submitted in this case.

As the Bee goes to press the special venire had been exhausted with the exception of two. It is probable that no jury will be secured to-day.

RENEWED CONFIDENCE.

Circular Letter from a New York and Toledo Firm

Which Shows That Cleveland's Election Means Prosperous Times for the Country.

This morning a circular of which the following is a synopsis was received on the floor of the 'Change:

Kennett, Hopkins & Co.,
New York, Chicago, London and Toledo.
November 11, 1892.

Dear Sir: The dullness of speculative operations in the stock market, which preceded and continued up to the very eve of election, has given place to increased activity in the general list, although the aggregate volume of business is still moderate. A great deal has been heard about impending disaster to the business interests of the country in case Mr. Cleveland was elected, and traders evidently thought Wednesday a good time to sell stocks, particularly the industrial; but in this they were mistaken, for the short stock had to be taken back at a loss. Conservative people do not see anything in the election of Mr. Cleveland that threatens the material prosperity of the country, and the idea that holders of securities are alarmed and will sell out their property because of this event may be dismissed without a moment's hesitation. In truth, if the result of the recent election has any bearing on the value of securities it is a favorable one, for it will tend to inspire confidence in our securities abroad. Every advance in prices here for a long time has been met by sales of foreign holdings of American securities because of distrust in our fiscal and monetary policy. The political change which has taken place will in some measure allay this fear, but it is doubtful if full confidence will return with the present silver coinage law in operation.

DID ITS WORK.

The Campaign of Education Was a Success.

New York, Nov. 14.—The World prints the following this morning:

"To the Editor of The World: The World money sent to Wisconsin was used for reading matter and its distribution. The fund was of great service and to that aid we are indebted for carrying the state.

"E. C. WALL,

SUIT FOR DIVORCE.

Huron County to Have a Sensational Case.

Norwalk, O., Nov. 14.—(Special)—A divorce suit has been begun in Huron county common please court which will create considerable sensation in Ohio and throughout the country where defendant is well known.

Defendant, Dr. H. R. Burner, a well-known specialist, is a resident of Newark, Licking county, Ohio, and quite wealthy. His wife's parents reside in this county. It is understood that defendant will not fight the suit and that Mrs. Burner, with her two children, will get several thousand dollars alimony.

The petition filed by plaintiff is quite a lengthy document. It is reported that Dr. Burner has gone or soon will go to Chicago to study christian science healing.

OHIO NEWSPAPER COMMENT.

Let It Go at That.

Cleveland belongs to the great body of skilled artisans. He is a first-class cabinet maker.—Canton News, (Dem.).

Now, All Together.

Hurrah for David B. Hill, the matchless democrat of the Empire state. May his shadow never grow less.—Medina Sentinel.

Which Is Just as Good.

Mr. Cleveland may not be a man of destiny, but he is a man of destination—and his destination is the white house.—Steubenville Gazette.

A Good Suggestion.

A suggestion for farmers—get together and debate how to improve the roads. Mud is one of the worst enemies the farmer has to face.—Cleveland Press.

Take Your Medicine.

Wonder who will get the postoffice when Dailey resigns. Charley Sutphen could fill the place to the satisfaction of everybody.—Van Wert Republican.

He Deserves It.

Ex-Gov. Campbell is receiving praise on every hand for the noble work he did in rolling up the immense democratic majority for Cleveland and Stevenson.—Lima Times.

Our Jimmy Will Be Recognized.

The general opinion of Ohio is that Campbell will be given a cabinet position under the Cleveland administration. The glorious victory of the Ohio democracy is certainly deserving of such recognition.—Norwalk Experiment-News.

A Proud Distinction.

Grover Cleveland enjoys the distinction not only of being the first democratic president to be elected to a second term since President Jackson, but also the distinction of being the first to be at the same time and ex-president and a president-elect.

Knew Whereof He Spoke.

It was ex-Gov. Campbell, who, early in the campaign, advised the people to keep their eyes on Ohio. "Jimmy" evidently knew what he was talking about and just at the present juncture Ohio is very much in the public eye.—Mansfield Shield.

What Boston Says Goes.

Emma Juch's blonde tresses have impressed Boston much as Paderewski's remarkable shock of hair did the whole country last year, although they lack the picturesque extravagance of that genius' locks.—Cleveland World.

An Object Lesson.

The fact that the republicans sustained losses both in the manufacturing centers and agricultural districts, shows that all classes of citizens have at last got their eyes open to the fact that republican "protection" is not for the masses.—Findlay Courier.

Caution the Watchman.

Democratic success carries with it democratic responsibility. The mistakes will be charged up to the party. Already the free trade press is bristling with advice to the incoming administration, and "caution" is the burden of every bit of this advice.—Canton Repository (Rep.).

This Is Confidential.

Grover, Frances and Baby Ruth will soon occupy the white house. Harrison will return to his practice of law in Indianapolis and Morton will continue his rum business as heretofore. The contest is over, the lion will lie down with the lamb and peace and tranquility will reign undisturbed abroad the land.—The Massillonian.

All Have Right to an Opinion.

The people are always so eager to learn what the Vindicator thinks, that we feel sure that Grover Cleveland is waiting for our suggestions as to the make-up of his cabinet. So here goes for the filling of two cabinet positions—with more to follow:

For Secretary of State—Wm. C. Whitney, of New York.

For Secretary of War—James E. Campbell, of Ohio.—Youngstown Vindicator.

Pride Before a Fall.

The superior-aired republicans do not know what to make of it. They thought their party impregnable, invincible, rooted away down under the foundation of all things. They deemed it God-ordained and protected from any possible assault of the mere people. Now they find it up-rooted, scattered, destroyed. Verily it is too much for their comprehension. They will, however, recover their dazed senses by and by, to find out that they are only of the common ordinary clay they esteemed their brethren, the democrats, after all.—Sandusky Journal.

Republicans Are of This Opinion.

It is quite probable that no party will in the future care to renominate a man for the presidency after one term. The antagonisms created during four years inside of the party prove too strong and the party cannot be held together in a compact form so as to carry the second election. Cleveland was defeated after his first term and now Harrison is defeated. It would seem as if people considered that one term was sufficient for any man and that out of 65,000,000 of people it is possible to select another who can fill the position acceptably. Mr. Cleveland, it is true, is elected for the second time, but in his case one administration intervened so that his case comes within the observation.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

REORGANIZED.

Bostwick, Braun & Co. Take a New Departure.

It Is Now a Stock Company With a Capital Stock of $200,000—Company Incorporated.

The hardware firm of Bostwick, Braun & Co. has taken a new and important departure.

The company has been reorganized into a stock company with a capital of $200,000.

The incorporation papers bear the following names: O. A. Bostwick, C. F. Braun, Geo. A. Braun, Charles Dustin, and H. H. Standart.

The new building, which is being erected for the company on the corner of St. Clair and Perry streets, will give the firm one of the largest and finest hardware establishments in the state.

The company as incorporated has not yet been organized, but probably will be this week.

THE SMOKE NUISANCE.

Meeting Called for To-Morrow Evening.

The following self-explanatory call has been issued:

Toledo, O., Nov. 14, 1892.

To Yourself and the Members of Your Firm:

The city council of Toledo has recently enacted an ordinance requiring the abatement of the smoke nuisance in our city necessitates the employment of effective devices for smoke prevention. In order that the fullest practical knowledge of the subject may be arrived at, some concerted action among interested parties in our city is deemed advisable, and you are urgently requested to attend a meeting having this object in view, to be held at the works of the Woolson Spice company, November 15, at 7:45 o'clock p. m. Entrance on Huron street. New building. Come and hear the reports.

Yours truly,
S. P. JERMAIN, Sec.

WELL KNOWN HERE.

Wm. Murphy, the Murdered Lake Shore Conductor.

He Ran Out of Toledo and Boarded at Air Line Junction.

Wm. J. Murphy, the Lake Shore freight conductor, who was murdered by his brother Frank in Cleveland yesterday, was well and favorably known here. His run was between Toledo and Collingwood. Those who knew him here say he was a quiet, inoffensive young man well liked by everyone.

The particulars of the dreadful affair will be found in the telegraphic columns. Anna Murphy and John J. Kerwick, of No. 263 1-2 Bridge street, were married Saturday evening. They went to the Murphy home to live with the bride's mother, who is about 75 years old. All day Sunday the home and relatives who desired to offer their congratulations to the newly wedded couple. These were the most intimate friends, and Sunday evening the reception was to have been extended to friends and neighbors less intimately acquainted with the young husband and wife. Among those present were Wm. J. Murphy and his wife. They had come to join in the merrymaking, from their home in Collinwood, bringing their two children with them. William was a freight conductor on the Lake Shore railroad, and his work was on the division between Collinwood and Toledo. He was a stout and robust man, 29 years old.

He entered heartily into the spirit of the occasion, but he had one trouble on his mind. That was caused by the fact that his older brother Frank had locked himself in his bedroom and had refused to see or talk to any of his relatives or the other guests, except when some of the men had gone to his room early in the morning. He had refused breakfast and dinner and at 4 o'clock it looked as if he would not appear at all. In the morning Frank admitted relatives to his room but after dinner he locked his door and refused to admit anybody.

When stopping for a day or night in Toledo he boarded at Air Line Junction, where he was liked and popular.

DESERVED PROMOTION.

Supt. Martin Carney to Go to Chicago.

Where He Will Have the Superintendency of the Telephone System of Illinois.

Mr. Martin Carney, superintendent of the telephone system in Ohio, a Toledo boy, and a royal good fellow, has received a deserved promotion.

His headquarters have been in Columbus, but his home has been in Toledo.

He has been promoted to the superintendency of the telephone system of Chicago and the state of Illinois.

It is an office worth about $7,000 a year and every friend of Martin's, while sorry to learn that he leaves Toledo, will rejoice to hear of his good fortune.

Mr. Carney has been very successful as an inventor, and his company owes a great many of the improvements in their telephone system to him. He holds the patent and draws a royalty on many valuable inventions and is continually at work improving and patenting something.

He was born and educated in Toledo, and while for years his headquarters have been in Columbus, yet he has never missed a Sunday out of Toledo.

He does not like the change for the reason that it takes him from Toledo and his friends here. He need not worry over having friends. He will have them wherever he goes. The Bee wishes him continued success.

THANKSGIVING DINNERS

Will be made more than ever memorable with the assistance of the Martha Washington cook-book, which is sent free to any address on receipt of 10 cents in stamps by E. O. McCormick, G. P. & T. Agent Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton railroad, Cincinnati, O. The C., H. & D. edition of the famous cook book contains 320 pages of old and tried recipes, fully illustrated. Be thankful, too, that the superb train service of the C., H. & D. via Cincinnati to the south make a journey to the milder climates of southland comfortable and pleasureable.

DOUBLE TRAGEDY.

New Philadelphia, O., Nov. 14.—Intelligence reached here yesterday afternoon that during a democratic jollification meeting last Sunday night at Bakersville, 16 miles west of this city, by the bursting of a cannon, a man whose name was not known, had one leg torn off, and a piece of the cannon struck Mrs. Ford, who was looking out of the window, and knocked her head off

ABSOLUTELY PURE

A GAMBLER'S ROW.

It Resulted in a Most Brutal Murder.

The Man Who Stained His Hands With Blood Has Died on the Scaffold.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 14.—Andrew Petrillo was hanged in the New Haven county jail this morning. The drop fell at 10:40 o'clock. At 10:55 the body was cut down and life pronounced extinct by the surgeons in attendance.

The crime for which Petrillo was hanged was a cold-blooded, premeditated murder.

Petrillo was an inveterate gambler and made a great deal of money by successful "monte throwing."

One of his victims was Michael Demeo, his brother-in-law, who kept a saloon on Lafayette street, this city.

Petrillo won money from him repeatedly before Demeo realized that he was being swindled. He resolved to get even and win some of his money back, so he engaged a professional gambler from New York to come to this city and play "monte" with Petrillo.

The gambler came and Petrillo fell into the trap. The New Yorker was more skillful than he was and in one sitting won over $200 from him. Words arose and Petrillo killed Demeo.

A BUNCH OF DATES.

Large Number of Club and Society Meetings.

The Dante club will meet this evening as usual, with the president, Mrs. Foley.

The Isabella circle will meet to-morrow (Tuesday) afternoon, with J. A. Rooney, 835 Superior street. The paper will be read by Miss Katharine Crowe, on the Loss of the Spanish Possessions in South America.

The adjourned meeting of the Humane society will be held Tuesday evening.

The Home Aid association will meet at Odd Fellows' temple, Tuesday night.

Mrs. Charles Peck, 91 Buffalo street, will entertain the members of the Ramaibai circle Wednesday afternoon.

The paper to be read by Mr. A. E. Macomber before the New Century club next Friday evening, will be entitled "Industrial Changes." The meeting will be held with Dr. and Mrs. Cravens.

The Political Equality club will hold the semi-monthly meeting Saturday afternoon, November 19, at 4 o'clock, with Miss Calkins, West Washington street. The first paper in the series to be read before the club on the Constitutional History of Ohio, will be read by the president, Mrs. Claude Q. Murphy.

CONGRESSMAN RITCHIE

Congratulated by the Bar in Common Pleas Court.

Judge Pugsley was calling the docket to a large attendance of the bar in common pleas court this morning, when Congressman-elect Byron Ritchie stepped in and took his seat, in his usual quiet and unostentatious manner. Immediately he was the center of attraction, and was soon surrounded by his brother lawyers, receiving the earnest and hearty congratulations of democrats and republicans alike. His face lighted up with pleasure, indicating the happiness he felt upon receiving the kindly greeting from his fellow lawyers, but bore his honors quietly and modestly.

TWO ADDRESSES

Delivered by Mrs. Springer on Home Missions.

Mrs. Col. Springer, of Iowa, delivered two interesting addresses on the subject of Women's Home Missionary work, yesterday.

In the morning she addressed a large audience in the Clark Street M. E. church, and in the evening spoke at the Third Street M. E. church.

Mrs. Springer is a fine speaker and a highly educated lady, being graduated from one of the best eastern colleges.

Her last diploma is from London, Eng., as fellow of science, literature and art.

THIRTY THANKSGIVING

Dinners To Be Contributed by the Ys.

At a meeting held Saturday afternoon the Ys decided to contribute 30 Thanksgiving dinners to the Toledo poor.

All the baskets will be filled alike, and donations are asked for, which can be sent to St. Paul's M. E. church, on November 23, from 3 to 6 o'clock p. m., or they can be left with Miss Bond at the Adams Street mission, Saturday afternoon, November 18.

To carry out their plans the young ladies will need 30 chickens, 300 pounds of flour, potatoes, apples, celery, oranges and pies.

The baskets will be given to needy families who otherwise would have no Thanksgiving dinner.

PREACHER COMMITS SUICIDE.

Orange, Mass., Nov. 14.—Rev. G. H. Harris, aged 22, pastor of the Universalist church, North Orange, committed suicide on Saturday night by shooting. He was unmarried and lived alone. He was not missed until his congregation was seated in church yesterday forenoon. A messenger found him dead in his study with a revolver in his hand. Mr. Harris was ordained last year. He was a native of Pennsylvania.

JUSTICE MERRIMAN DEAD.

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 14.—Soon after 2 o'clock this morning Chief Justice Augustus S. Merriman died at his home here of diabetes, after several months of critical illness. He was born September 15, 1830, in what was then part of Buncombe county, and early in life after having received only a common school education, showed high ability.

A Merry Christmas for Them.

It seems to have been a very difficult task for the McKinley folks to accept the inevitable this time. The chances are that they will awaken to the fact that they are annihilated somewhere about Christmas.—Boston Herald.

A Worthy Example.

One of the Toledo, O., boodling councilmen has acknowledged his guilt. All steal, but few confess, and the example of trusting humility and courteous desire to save Lucas county the expense of a trial stands out in bold relief.—Chicago Dispatch.

The Blade Is in This State of Suspense.

In Ohio men of great political weight and moment are still anxiously awaiting to hear how the sixty-odd votes of Podunk township went, and hence the Buckeye state is still in doubt.—Chicago Dispatch.

Not One.

The congressional district in which Mr. McKinley lives, and which was gerrymandered by the last legislature of Ohio in the interest of the republican party, has gone democratic. Is there a lone, solitary hook left anywhere on which protection can hang a trembling hope?—Kansas City Star.

This Monument Will Stand.

The Richmond Dispatch calls for a monument to Pocahontus. If there is any other historic American character without a monument or a project for one well under way, let the same be mentioned quickly. It is a year of monuments. The people have just reared one over the McKinley tariff law. It has 300 bricks and each one is an electoral vote for Grover Cleveland.—Rochester Herald.

The Bud Will Never Boom.

The situation, as viewed from the fertile valley of the Miami, would seem to indicate that Mr. McKinley's presidential aspirations have met a January frost, just when they were most tender and liable to be damaged by such an incident.—Dayton Press.

TO DINE GROVER.

New York, Nov. 14.—President Cleveland is to be the guest of honor at a banquet given by the Reform club at the Madison Square garden assembly rooms, Saturday evening, December 3. Then the club members and their friends propose to have a grand jollification over the triumph achieved Tuesday last.

There's a regular craze for Poole Overcoats.

Seems though every gentleman in Toledo who has hitherto patronized the "stylish" tailor has been in our Clothing Shop looking at them. They're the reigning sensation of the trade.

It's a new overcoat shape. It's from London, where all gentlemen's fashions originate. It's a copy of a coat made by the famous Poole, tailor to the Prince of Wales. You see it in picture today—the long, generous sack shape, from smooth Kersey or the celebrated English Carr Melton.

It's true form and will do you true and laudable service. We are proud of this coat. You'll be proud too when you shall own it. The price, $25. Your tailor will ask you twice $25.

THE AUTUMNAL DAY.

For once that I might wander far,
Far out into this autumn day,
And breathe the light, elastic air,
And trace the half-forgotten way

A day so rare, so deeply tinged
With the sweet life warm flowing down,
That light and shadow, leaf and stem,
Seem fused in lovely unison.

I long to walk on rustling leaves,
That in the woody places fall;
And turn to catch the golden rays
Of evening flickering over all

To touch the dark, moist earth, to part
The waters with resisting hand,
Wild leaping through their rocky path
Or coursing o'er the shining sand.

To climb the rugged steep, and stand
Where downward slope the valleys fair
And feel my heritage to be
The sunshine and the open air.

Through purple vistas far away
To see the sunny upland gleam;
And watch the dying foliage wave
Deep mirrored in the glassy stream.

Call it not death! A finer life
Than spring e'er gave, emerges now
A saddened glory fills the air
And trembles on the bending bough.

A light, unfading and divine,
Gleams through this passing loveliness
The murmur of a deep repose,
A symbol of the spirit's rest.

Farewell, bright day! slow gliding down
You peaceful sea of boundless light,
Thy drooping pinions softly veil
The silent shadows of the night.

BY THE PEOPLE.

What a Popular Election Signifies.

Conclusive Returns From the Old Bay State.

Interviews on the More Important Issues.

Men of All Parties Agree Upon One Point.

What They Say in Boston and Other Cities.

In the long run "the people" are right, and popular elections determine the best government, whatever results from any one campaign. There is natural tendency in men to seek the true remedy for social ills, and the people in the end will find it.

Of all temporal affairs, the most important is health. People are learning better and better how to preserve it and to regain it, and whatever a few may say to the contrary the experience of thousands of "the people" again determines the efficacy of the remedies.

Occasionally, as in the case of the well-known formula of Dartmouth's great professor, Edward E. Phelps, there is no dispute between theory and practice. From the very first, the medical fraternity, to whom the formula of Paine's celery compound was furnished, agreed that at last a remedy had been discovered for the cure of nervous diseases, neuralgia, rheumatism, kidney troubles and all the diseases arising from impure blood.

The experience of "the people" here has proved the truth of their opinion beyond the shadow of a doubt. No remedy was ever in so great and ever-increasing demand, and none ever received the encomiums of so many people in every class of society.

Following are a few of the hundreds of testimonials from Boston and other Massachusetts cities within the last few months.

SOME BOSTON RETURNS.

Men and Women of Well-Known Standing—Experiences.

Mrs. J. R. Neale, 21 High street—It gives me great pleasure to express my faith in Paine's celery compound. I consider it a wonderful medicine. I have taken several bottles each season for the past three years.

I did not sleep well nights, was greatly troubled with dyspepsia and inactive liver. After finishing one bottle of the compound I felt so much better that I continued its use until I had taken five bottles, and was astonished at the results. Relatives and friends whom I have advised to use the compound have all received marked benefit from its use.

Joseph J. Byron, 109 Silver street—I consider it my duty to the public to send this testimonial so that some poor unfortunate like the writer may obtain some of the relief that I have experienced through the use of Paine's celery compound.

I am a traveling agent and advertiser. For five and a half years I have been a sufferer from chronic rheumatism, and have tried every kind of medicine, but could get no relief until a friend advised me to try celery compound. I did so simply to oblige my friend, as I had long since lost all hope of a cure. I purchased half a dozen bottles of the compound and used it just as though it had been prescribed by a regular physician. The result was a joyful surprise to me, as I began to feel quite limber about my joints. I bought a dozen bottles of the compound, and before I had used it all I felt as strong and healthy as I ever did.

WOMEN'S OPINIONS.

They Find This of the Utmost Interest in November.

Mrs. M. H. Volk, 17 Gainsboro street—I had what the physicians call nervous exhaustion and blood poisoning. I was completely exhausted, so tired all the time, no strength, no appetite, and so despondent that I would cry about half the time. When I would go up a flight of stairs, by the time I reached the top it seemed as though my limbs would crumble beneath me. My mind was in a terrible state. I could not remember anything any length of time. I would start to go for something and I would forget what it was before I got across the floor. I could not keep my mind upon anything and I was continually growing worse.

"I tried different kinds of medicines, also different physicians. I tried one doctor who said I would feel like a new person in two weeks. I paid for a course of medicine which took about ten days and was growing weaker every day. I got so that I could not sleep day or night, and could not sit up but a little. This was one year ago. I had been running down for three or four years. My husband brought home a bottle of Paine's celery compound. I have taken seven or eight bottles and to-day am feeling well as the result of its use. I can do my own work. I have not found it necessary to take any during the past month. I have recommended the medicine to several."

From all over the state, from Buzzard's Bay to Hoosac Tunnel, come scores of testimonials daily, and there is not a town in the state but has men and women who have their grateful letters telling how Paine's celery compound has given relief or made them well.

MUSIC AS MEDICINE.

The one discovery above all others that has made Ambroise Pare famous for all time was the plan, which he was the first to suggest, of tying the arteries after the surgical removal of a limb. In one part of his writings he gives a curious account of a case of successful amputation, in which he appears to have anticipated one of the latest of modern fads, and to have used music as medicine. The patient had been wounded in battle. The famous surgeon took him in hand, successfully amputated the limb, using his new plan of tying the arteries, and when the sufferer began to mend, prescribed what the quaint English of the translation describes as "a consort of violins and a jester to make him merry." In a month the patient was able to hold himself up in a chair, and was carried down to the gate of his castle to see the people pass by.

A successful issue to such an operation must have been of rare occurrence, for we are told that "the country people of two or three leagues about knowing they could see him, came the first day, male and female, to sing and dance pell-mell in joy of his amendment, all being very glad to see him, which was not done without good laughing and drinking."

"The camp being broken up," concluded Pare, "I returned to Paris with my gentleman, whose leg I had cut off. I dressed him and God cured him. I sent him to his house merry with his wooden leg, and was content, saying that he had escaped good cheap not to have been miserably burned."—All the Year Round.

ELECTRIC ROADS FOR FARMERS.

The Time Coming When They May Abandon Wagons and Buggies.

The road wagons and the short-lived top buggies and carriages of the farmer cost him a very pretty penny in the course of a year, or a term of years, and they represent a service which the electric railway can largely abolish, says Wm. N. Black in the Engineering Magazine. But against this saving must be set the cost of the railroads, the electric power stations, the rent of electric wagons, and operating expenses. What would be the amount? An accurate estimate cannot, of course, be made here because conditions differ so widely in different sections of the country; but as close a calculation as we can make in advance, founded on the cost of the electric railroads already in operation, warrants us in saying that probably 90 per cent. of the roadways in the United States could be equipped with the necessary track, poles and wires at a cost of $3,500 per mile. In a district 10 miles square—the surface that could be served from a single central power station—there would be, in the larger part of the Union, about 100 miles of railway. Then the total cost of track for a district 10 miles square would be $350,000. This represents a capitalization of only $5 to the acre, and all annual interest charge of only 30 cents per acre. With a central power station large enough to operate all the wagons or cars that would be called into use at one time in the district, the capitalization need not be more than $10 per acre. This would mean an annual interest charge of $60 for each hundred acres of land. It must be conceded that this does not seem like a very heavy tax when we consider the nature of the service rendered available, the great saving in the cost and maintenance of horses and wagons, the enormous economy of time, and the greatly enhanced value of improved farm lands. If the interest charge mounted to $100 per year, and the farmers were themselves chiefly the stockholders of the electric companies, it would still represent an economy.

THE ARTFUL BOW ON THE BACK

In setting out to give feminine readers of the Bee a daily illustrated lesson in dress, permit me to say that some of the novelties of adornment are beyond explanation. For example, what is it that gives the remarkable value to a bow fastened half way up a woman's back? It certainly has a womanly, home-like, loveable look that no other one accessory gives. This pretty bodice depicts the idea. Any plain material will take this style. It will be pretty carried out in any color. The gown in my sketch is grey—a soft darkish grey, as dark as stone color, but not so cold. The skirt is not bell-shaped, but made as skirts used to be—rather plain, except for the fullness at the back, and dragging a little. The bodice is made loose on the lining, the fullness being drawn down in pointed lines front and back, and held in place by a bodice of narrow grey ribbon. The ribbon passes around from back to front; then the ends cross in front, drawing the ribbon close all around at the waist line, and are carried back again meeting just below the center of the back, and there tied in a pretty bow, the loops of which go upward, while the long ends float down as long as the skirt. Around the armhole lace is sewed to give almost a cape effect. The edge of the bodice shows in a soft puff just below the ribbon bodice. It is almost as if the bodice were cut blouse shape, and then drawn in by the belt. This same effect is prettily carried out in the sleeves. A big puff forms the upper sleeve to the elbow. Then just at the elbow a band of grey ribbon is tied and the puff is drawn down a little and the edge shows below the ribbon. The rest of the sleeve is plain.

This dress suits a slender or angular figure. It supplies all needed softness and grace of outline. A fresh, bright skin and chestnutty sunny hair are well suited by the shade of grey represented, or a really golden blonde with fair and pink skin will "look a dream." Of course, my gentle readers will know how to adapt the fabrick to their individual requirements.

FLORETTE.

CHINESE NEVER SAVE LIFE.

They Regard It as Interfering With the Intentions of the Creator.

Much has been written of the peculiarities and eccentricities of the Chinese, but it is not generally known that the people of the celestial empire will not rescue one another from accidental death, says the Brandon Banner.

At a fire in San Francisco several years ago six Chinese were imprisoned in a room by three half-inch iron bars, which could easily have been broken away. There were two or three ladders in the neighborhood which could have been placed at the windows and the unfortunates easily rescued from a horible death. There were hundreds of their countrymen looking on at their frantic efforts to escape. Yet they offered no assistance and gave no evidence of sorrow.

A man who has saved many lives, in speaking with a Chinese once said they were very heartless, and cited this San Francisco fire as an example, whereupon the Celestial exclaimed:

"I tell you. You sabee Joss? Gol Almighty, allee samee. Chinaman call him Joss; Mellican man call him God. Call him anything. Allee samee. Now you say Gol Almighty make eblethin?"

"Yes, everything.'

"Makee allee men?"

"Yes."

"Know eblethin?"

"Yes."

"Now, do you think you know more than Gol Almighty?"

"No, I do not."

"He makee allee men. He see one man. He thinks him no good. He say: 'You no use; go die.' You go swim; you no let man die. Gol Almighty he say: 'You velly smart. He catchee man I tell go die. Velly well, that man he begin new. He cally that man's life all him sins, all him troubes, all him bad luck. You hab heap good things?"

"No."

"No hab much houses, much money, much land?"

"All light, you nebbe hab much luck. How many you save?"

"About fifty."

"Oh, you lebber get out. You call all fifty life. Ebleting yo do, no finish, work allee time heap trouble. You nebbe get old; you live long time. Sabbe fifty life. You live hundred years—hab bad luck allee time. Gol Alhighty, he sabee best."

A GREAT SOPRANO SINGER.

Angelica Catalini was probably the greatest soprano singer that ever lived. Born in 1779, before she attained her 12th year she was already famous. In the full freshness of youth her voice was of extraordinary compass, going as high as G in altissimo with a wonderfully pure, sweet tone. No singer ever equalled her, either in velocity or precison in the execution of chromatic passages, and her execution of difficult and brilliant music was so true that everywhere she created the greatest furor. In 1795 she made her operatic debut at Venice, and until the date of her last public performance, for season after season, she electrified all Europe, many operas being written expressly for her voice.

Her gains from musical performances were enormous for that time. In 1807 she received from managers over $80,000 then a far greater sum than at present. She did what few female singers were able to do; left the stage in the height of her fame, retiring to a villa near Florence, in 1828. Her charity was unbounded. The amount of money expended by her in founding and endowing charitable institutions was estimated at $500,000. She died in 1849 at Paris of cholera.

Queen Victoria's ostrich is homesick since its transfer from Liverpool to the London Zoological Gardens. It has sullenly refused to eat, and bananas have been rammed down its throat by the unsentimental keepers. The other day Superintendent Bartlett inflicted an additional indignity upon the royal bird by forcibly administering a big dose of castor oil. It is feared the queen will never look upon the bird alive. If it should die it will be preserved and stuffed and stuck in a hallway at Windsor Castle or Osborne house.

SO RUNS THE WORLD AWAY.

By A. R.

Deacon Wynn had long since been snugly tucked in bed; but his daughter Alice still sat in the sitting room, listening with feverish eagerness for every sound. Suddenly she sprang up and went to the door.

"Horace!"

A tall, handsome man, with dark eyes and wavy black hair, drooping over a forehead smooth and white as moulded wax, bent carelessly to receive the kiss that fluttered on her lips.

"There, Alice, there—that will do. You tire me to death!"

"Do I, Horace? You did not say so once!"

"I am sick and weary of these absurd demonstrations. Do, pray use a little common sense."

Alice stood silent a moment, repressing the tears that were brimming over her eyelids.

"You have been hunting all day, dear,' she said, trying to assume a sprightly air, "so you haven't heard the news?"

"News—no. What news is there?"

"Old Mr. Wayne is dead—"

"Dead, is he? Are you certain, Alice?"

"Miriam told me so. Oh! Horace, they are all broken-hearted there."

"Who cares for their broken hearts!" exclaimed Horace Calthorpe, in a tone of savage exultation. "So the old man is dead! dead at last!"

"What do you mean, Horace?"

"Mean? Nothing. Don't pester me with your everlasting questions, Alice. I am not in the most indulgent or amiable of moods to-night, young lady, as you may chance to find out, if you're not pretty careful."

"I am very sorry you don't feel kindly toward me to-night, Horace," said Alice, with a quivering lip, "for—for—I've a great favor to ask of you. Horace—dear Horace—why will you not publicly acknowledge our marriage? If you knew the false position in which it puts me; the misery I endure; the—"

"Silence!" Horace Calthorpe rose, with passionate fury. "I have told you, often enough, how sick I am of these pretty hysterical airs and graces; and now I want you distinctly to understand that I shall tolerate them no longer. I will acknowledge you as my wife when and where I please; and if I choose never to acknowledge you. I should like to know how you are going to help yourself!"

He took up the flaring light, and went up stairs to the room he occupied, as "gentleman boarder" for the shooting season, leaving Alice a still picture of white, motionless despair.

"He cannot mean it! oh, no, he never, never can mean it!" broke in incoherent syllables from her cold lips, as she clasped her hands tightly together, in the awful silence of the lonely room.

Meanwhile Horace Calthorne, in his own apartment, was quietly packing down one or two indispensable articles into a small valise, the lamplight streaming redly on a face that bore somewhat of demoniac exultation on its faultlessly handsome features.

"The Evil One's own luck," he muttered to himself, hurriedly turning over a bundle of papers. "The certificate here in my own hands—the old minister dead—the only witness killed before Wilmington. The momentary fancy had like to cost me dear. I don't know how I ever became so infatuated with her doll face and red lips; but it's all over now. I can go back to New York and win my way once more into Virginia's good graces. The fact is, I never was created to live or love among the mountains. Broadway and an heiress are certainly my natural elements. Heigho! I wonder if I can catch the 10 o'clock night express, at Paudington. It's a long walk, and a dark, dismal sort of a night, but I think I might manage it."

So soliloquized the adamant-hearted man of the world.

"Gone! It cannot be possible; he never would leave me! Gone! without a word or sign!"

Poor, young, deserted wife! it was a bitter cup for those ruby lips to taste; but when the last dregs were drained, there was something in the draught that turned her gentle nature to gall and wormwood. Alice Wyman had been a meek, shrinking, sensitive child; Alice Calthorpe was an avenging Nemesis.

"Upon the whole, my dear, I think it's altogether the best thing you could have done. Grovedale is dull; there's no denying that, and since it's absolutely necessary for you to earn a living, New York is the place to do it in."

Honest Mrs. Truman bustled to and fro, between her shining black-leaded stove and the little round table, whereon she was depositing cups, saucers and queer, old-fashioned silver teaspoons, with raised roses on their handles. While Alice Calthorpe sat by the window, wondering vaguely if she should ever become used to the ceaseless thunder of omnibus, cart, and carriage, or if the heavy vaporous smoke would ever change to a blue, delicious atmosphere, like that which hung over the mountains of Grovedale.

And all the time, close to her beating heart, lay the one dear to her new life; the scrap of a torn, uncompleted letter, with "Virginia Clevington" carelessly penciled again and again on the margin.

Virginia Clevington! Some unmistakable instinct in her woman's heart told her that this was the rival who had stolen away her husband—perhaps unconsciously, yet none the less surely and certainly. Virginia Clevington she would find, though she perished in the search!

"And what are you going to do, my dear?" questioned the good Grovedale neighbor, who was now domiciled in the great, throbbing heart of New York. "I've found dressmaking to pay, pretty tolerably well, and I wouldn't recommend governessin'. Folks care a sight more for the outsides of their heads than the inside. 'Taint hard work, and it's genteel, too, or—bless me, what am I thinkin' about, when I heard of a capital chance only yesterday. Would you object to bein' a kind o' companion? Not exactly lady's maid, but more exclusive like?"

Alice looked drearily up; she had scarcely heard Mrs. Truman's flow of words.

"For," went on the worthy woman, "Miss Clevington's dressmaker was here to tea last night, and she told me—"

"Clevington—Miss Clevington—"

Alice was attentive enough now. She had risen to her feet with white, sickly eagerness, clinging to Mrs. Truman's hand, as a shipwrecked mariner clings to a floating drift of seaweed.

"Yes, do you know her?"

"I have heard of her. Yes, I have heard of her. I should like to be Miss Clevington's companion. Where does she live? Let us go to her at once!"

"Not till you have had a cup of tea, dear," said Mrs. Truman, secretly beginning to believe that travel and excitement had unsettled the pale young girl's senses.

"Yes—O, yes—let us go now," pleaded Alice, beginning, with quivering hands, to tie her bonnet strings. "Some one else may have got the situation. I—I should like so much to be lady's maid to Miss Clevington. Do you think she will accept my services, Mrs. Truman?"

"Of course she will," said the old lady, bridling up a little. "My recommendation's worth something, though I say it myself. And if you're in such a powerful hurry, why, I can put the tea back an hour or so. Only brush your hair, dear, and pray don't look so ghastly pale."

Virginia Clevington had just come in from a drive—come in with cheeks tinted like a ripe peach, and her brown hair tossed about by the fresh wind, and stood there, with the little gloves half pulled from her fairy fingers, a lovely picture of girlish beauty in its prime. Yet not more beautiful to look at than the pale girl who was sewing in the shadow of the emerald silk curtains. Only over one had swept the equinoctial tempests of life's sharpest grief, while the other knew but calm and sunshine.

"You're tired, Alice, dear," said Virginia Clevington, softly. "Put by your work—rest a little while."

It was a part of her benign nature to be sweet and tender to all created beings, but to Alice the words of sympathy were inexpressibly grateful. She dropped her head on Virginia's soothing hand, and burst into tears.

"Alice!"

"It is only the sharp pain at my heart," groaned poor Alice. "Oh, Miss Clevington, may I tell you the story of my life? Then, perhaps, you will not deem me weak and fanciful when I give way to these foolish bursts of grief?"

"Tell me," whispered Virginia, kneeling at her pale companion's side, "tell me all."

"But it should bring a sharp pang to your heart, Miss Clevington?"

"I cannot imagine how it should do so."

Alice hesitated a moment, with the white and red fluttering like wind-stirred banners over her cheek.

"Miss Clevington," she said, "the surgeon's hand should not hesitate to probe the hidden wounds. I will not falter longer. Is it true that you are to be married to Horace Calthorpe next month?"

"Yes—it is true?"

Virginia spoke frankly, with the sweet roses deepening over her delicate face—as one woman speaks to another with her whole heart trembling on her lips.

"Let me tell you the history of my marriage, Miss Clevington."

The afternoon sunshine faded into purple tides of sunset—the sunset died into silver-bright star beams—and yet Virginia Clevington knelt there, listening to Alice's soft, measured tones. Which of those two women suffered most would be difficult to tell; it was like the bitterness of death to both.

"I am late to-night, I know, mia cara," said Horace Calthorpe, caressingly, as he laid his hat and gloves on the center table, and put his arm round Virginia's slight waist; "but indeed it was the fault of unavoidable business. What! shrinking away from me, love? Surely so slight a fault should not be visited by penance like that. Let me seal my forgiveness on your lips, my darling."

Virginia Clevington drew back as she might have recoiled from the approach of a deadly serpent, or hissing adder.

"Never again, Horace Calthorpe! You have been false to the noblest and truest instincts of your being—you have proved yourself a villain and a hypocrite! From this moment our lives shall no longer mingle in the same channel of daily intercourse."

"Virginia!"

But she went on, with flushed cheeks and sparkling eyes:

"Horace Calthorpe, how dared you approach me with false smiles and hollow words of endearment? How dared you aspire to my hand when your wife—your wife in the sight of God and man—was pining away, unacknowledged and forgotten?"

"My wife! Dearest Virginia, some impostor has been practicing on your credulity. I have no wife—I never had one."

For answer Virginia Clevington parted the azure folds of the heavy silken curtains and revealed a slight figure in the deep embrasure—Alice—whiter than any sculptured stone!

"There is your wife, Mr. Calthorpe!"

Horace elevated his handsome eyebrows.

"I don't deny that I may have flirted with that young woman at times, while I was ruralized among the mountains up North, but as for her being my wife, that's simply ridiculous. Let her prove it if she can."

Virginia Clevington, pale and resolute, opened the folding doors that led into a little study beyond.

"Mr. Wayne—your evidence is needed to decide this matter."

Had a dead corpse arisen from its winding sheet, Horace Calthorpe could not have been more astounded or bewildered than at the sight of the venerable clergyman who had performed the marriage service between himself and Alice Wyman.

"Wayne," he stammered—"Wayne! I thought Mr. Wayne was dead."

"Not dead," returned the silver-haired old man, "but spared by a merciful Providence to protect the theatened future of this young girl. Miss Clevington, you have had a narrow escape. God grant that you fall into no more such temptation."

Meanwhile Alice had advanced to confront her recreant husband.

"Horace," she said in a voice that was low but perfectly calm, "do not imagine that I shall ever again claim your love or protection. Henceforward our lives must be separate and distinct. I have saved Miss Clevington from your evil wiles; I have avenged myself. We shall meet no more."

Her words were prophetic; they never met again. And few New Yorkers know, in the faded seamstress that plies her daily trade, the wife of Horace Calthorpe, who is the most daring speculator in Wall street.

TO BURY DEAD DIFFERENTLY.

"The twentieth century is destined to witness a complete revolution in the manner of disposing of the dead," said Dr. C. W. Shaw, now at the Southern. "Burial is destined to give place to cremation. We will be driven to it in sheer self-defense. The increase in population, and a better understanding of the science of sanitation and its importance, will leave no place for the disease-breeding cemetery. America is destined to lead in the great reform, as she has in so many others. While the modern cremation movement started in Italy, the number of crematories in the United States for exceeds that in the former, or any other country. Fourteen are already in successful operation here, all having been built during the past six years. Cremation socities are being organized in nearly all of the large and many of the smaller American cities. Everybody recognizes the wisdom of incineration, still individual sensitiveness to any change in the burial custom, and an inherited belief that the body should 'fester in its shroud rather' than be burned to a handful of clean ashes in a furnace, form the greatest obstacle in the pathway of the reform. In the early days of the new movement the religious organizations formed a strong opposition to it, but this has given way except in Germany, where church and state make common cause against it. The state church openly prohibits the exercise of religious rites by a clergyman at incinerations. In the United States some of the most enthusiastic cremationists are devout church people."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

THE CONTINUITY OF DEATH.

But it is a truism to declare that total extinction does not come with the actual closing of a coffin lid. Not only do the good and evil deeds of a man live after him, but his personality does not perish at the moment of his funeral. Death has still something left to destroy. In truth, we die many times. The old world imprecation, "Let his memory perish," expresses admirably the fact that a secondary existence is generally secured to us through the faithfulness of other men's recollection. So long as any child survives to mourn for us, so long as our name can evoke a distinct image in any human mind, so long as any one can recognize our portrait, our handwriting, or our tour de phrase, we have not absolutely left the world. Obliteration only comes with the passing away of our generation, and it is the coming in of the new generation that inevitably and remorselessly brings about the last of our successive and partial annihilations.—Edinburgh Review.

If Barytes and other adulterants of White Lead are just as good as Strictly Pure White Lead
why is it that all the bogus and adulterated white leads are always branded "Pure," or "Strictly Pure White Lead?"

No one ever puts a misleading brand on an article of merchandise, unless he wants to "work off" an inferior for a better.

This Barytes or Baryta, is a heavy white powder, worthless as paint; costing only about one cent per pound and is used to adulterate and cheapen the mixture. No one ever adulterates white lead with an article costing more than Lead.

If you purchase any of the following brands you are sure of having strictly pure white lead—
ANCHOR (Cincinnati)
ARMSTRONG & McKELVY (Pittsburgh)
BEYMER-BAUMAN (Pittsburgh)
COLLIER (St. Louis)
CORNELL (Buffalo)
DAVIS-CHAMBERS (Pittsburgh)
ECKSTEIN (Cincinnati)
FAHNESTOCK (Pittsburgh)
MORLEY (Cleveland)
RED SEAL (St. Louis)
SHIPMAN (Chicago)
SOUTHERN (St. Louis and Chicago)

These brands of strictly pure White Lead and the National Lead Co.'s Tinting Colors are for sale by the best dealers in paints everywhere.

If you are going to paint, it will pay you to send to us for a book containing information that may save you many a dollar; it will only cost you a postal card to do so.

AT THE PHOTOGRAPHER'S.

Men and Women Alike Reveal Their Innate Vanity.

If you want to see humanity in all the full glory of its personal vanity just spend an hour at a popular and fashionable photographer's, and note the behavior, one after another, of the sitters, whether they be young or old, men or women.

The first one to arrive is an eldery lady from out of town, who came early, so as to have the uninterrupted attention of the operator—(sounds like dissecting-table talk, doesn't it?) She is attired in a stiff and rustling black silk, her thin, gray locks are parted in front and slightly waved. What there is of her own and about ten dollars' worth of somebody else's hair at the back is arranged in a hard, uncompromising knot.

She has stopped on the way and bought a tortoise-shell pin in the shape of a fan, which she proceeds to adjust to her satisfaction. Here is where the trouble begins—her coiffure is most unsatisfactory. She appeals to the colored attendant for advice as to the most becoming way of adjusting that Mikado ornament and when together they get it fixed to suit her the poor old lady presents such a rakish appearance that her respectable husband and her numerous sons and daughters will never recognize the picture and lay all the blame on the long-suffering artist.

A man in his first dress suit next enters the studio. He is ill at ease; so also is his collar. He is anxious to pose himself after a photograph of Mantell which pleased him immensely and which was the cause of the rash expenditure for a suit that is about as becoming to him as doublet and hose would have been to the late lamented Jumbo.

A very pretty woman who has been told she had a most fetching smile is possessed to grin like a "chessy cat" in order to get in her best point. She manges to "look pleasant" to a degree soul-satisfying even to the most exacting poseur, and whether it will be a picture of a smile and a face or a face and a smile is a matter of grave doubt that the proof alone will reveal.

A tiny baby only four months old, yet imbued with the universal weakness, cooed and gurgled gleefully over its shoulder knots of white satin ribbon that its fond mamma thought made it look "so stylish" but which detracted from the beauty of the dear little face peeping out above two knobs that looked like coachmen's wedding favors.

If we could only be natural when we go to be "taken" how much trouble would be the result, but anxious to be so wonderfully good looking, we primp and fuss until we don't like ourselves or any other respectable person.

WAKE UP!
If you wake up in the morning with a bitter or bad taste in your mouth, Languor, Dull Headache, Despondency, Constipation, take Simmons Liver Regulator. It corrects the bilious stomach, sweetens the breath and cleanses the furred tongue. Children as well as adults sometimes eat something that does not digest well, producing Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Restlessness, or Sleeplessness—a good dose of Regulator will give relief. So perfectly harmless is this remedy that it can be taken by the youngest infant or the most delicate person without injury, no matter what the condition of the system may be. It can do no harm if it does no good, but its reputation for 40 years proves it never fails in doing good.

City Auditor's Office

Toledo, Ohio, Oct. 24th, 1892.

The committee on ways and means of the Common Council of the city of Toledo, Ohio, and the undersigned invite sealed proposals at this office to

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 28TH, 1892,

at 7 o'clock p. m. for the purchase of General Fund Bonds to the amount of Seventy Thousand ($70,000) Dollars, issued for Natural Gas purposes in pursuance of authority conferred by the General Assembly of the state of Ohio, entitled "An act to supplement section 2491 of the revised statutes of Ohio, as heretofore supplemented, by enacting section 2491c and section 2491b," passed April 7, 1892, and also by an Ordinance of the Common Council of the City of Toledo which provides for the issue of General Fund Bonds to the amount of Seventy Thousand Dollars, passed May 16, 1892, for the purpose of procuring territory, right of way, sinking wells for natural gas, purchasing wells and natural gas works, purchasing and laying pipe, and supplying such city with natural gas for public and private use and consumption. Said bonds shall be of the denomination of One Thousand Dollars, and be dated July 1, 1892, to run for a period of 25 years from date, and be made payable at the Importers' and Traders' National Bank, in the City of New York, with interest at the rate of 4 1-2 per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually at the same place, to be evidenced by proper coupons attached to said bonds.

No proposal will be accepted for less than par and accrued interest from date of said bonds to date of delivery at Toledo.

Bidders will be required to state the gross amount they will pay for the bonds besides the accrued interest to date of delivery at Toledo, Ohio. They will also be required to deposit with each bid an amount of money or a certified check on some responsible bank equal to at least five (5) per centum of the par value of the bonds so bid for, as a guarantee of good faith, and that the bid so made (if successful) will be fulfilled in accordance with the terms thereof, and the requirements of the law and ordinances. When the bids have been examined, and the award made according to law, all monies or checks deposited as guarantees shall be returned to the depositor, or held by the city auditor subject to his call, except that of the successful bidder, which shall be held and considered, and accepted as part payment of the bonds so awarded or sold, but should there be any repudiation of the contract or agreement, or refusal to accept and pay for the bonds so sold then and in that case the deposit shall be forfeited to the city of Toledo, and shall become the property of said city, in compensation for loss and expenses attending the sale of said bonds and as liquidated damages for repudiation of bid. And no bid will be received if not accompanied by money or check aforesaid.

The right is reserved to reject any or all bids.

Proposals should be addressed to the "Auditor of the City of Toledo, Ohio," and be endorsed "Proposals for Gas Bonds."

SOLID PHILADELPHIA.

Bab Likes the Quaker City's Substantial Residences.

Wholesome Cookery in William Penn's City.

Eat Properly and You Can't Be Immoral—What Practical People Should Eat.

I like to go over to Philadelphia, because every time I do I become more and more convinced that the reason people live longer there is because they have more time to do it in. This sounds a little mixy, but it isn't. I devoted two whole days to watching the business men in Philadelphia, and I came to the conclusion that their methods were altogether charming. In most of the big cities a man careers out to his luncheon, gobbles up a sandwich, washes it down with a drink, goes back to his office, has indigestion, and is bitterly cross all the afternoon.

How Philadelphians Live.

They do these things better in Philadelphia. About 2 o'clock a man gets up slowly, puts on his top coat and hat, strolls leisurely to his favorite resort, joins two or three other friends, consumes an hour and a half in eating, goes back to his office at peace with all mankind and prepared to raise the wages of the office boy. Men get rich in Philadelphia, but they make haste slowly. I think that is the secret of success in life, for then you get the best of everything—you have time to linger over the heart of the celery, and to appreciate the delightful gurgle-gurgle of the Burgundy. A genial glow overspreads the face in time, and the Philadelphian millionaire is pleasing in manner and anecdotal in conversation. He is interested in births, deaths and marriages—people do get married—in Philadelphia. And his local pride is exquisite.

He builds rows of houses for his employes—that is one fault I have to find with him. They are what might be called

"Sweet Little Houses!"

Each is a beautiful red brick, with a nice white tombstone step and an extension made of frame, which is a bathroom, and this invariably has a lace curtain at the window. These houses are in blocks. I am not going to make the old objection that people living in houses so much alike would not know which was theirs and which was not, but I am going to say that I should think they would all get to be alike. That Mrs. Smith would be able to say, "Mrs. Brown is sitting in the front parlor rocking, now, the bell has rung, she has gone out into the dining room for tea; now some company has come and they have taken them up to the front room to take off their bonnets; now they have come down stairs again, and they are sitting in the parlor talking, and the two Smith boys are taking a bath! Gracious goodness! If I lived in a block like that I would use the parlor for the kitchen; I would sleep in the dining room, have the dining room upstairs and paint the steps red. If I were like everybody else I should feel like a tin of beef, as if I ought to be sold by the dozen.

Can't you imagine how the unfortunate housed in this way would put an arm chair in one corner and a rocking chair in the other, a sofa in the middle facing the mantel, a stiff chair with a knit tidy on it by the window, and then have "God Bless Our Home" over the shelf? That is the great wrong that the Philadelphia millionaire does. Even people who are not millionaires want houses that do not duplicate their neighbors; then it is possible for them to live originally, to make homes and not habitations. Don't you agree with me? Mankind, embracing womanhood, is a contradictory animal, and it does not want to live, breathe and have its being after the manner of the people above or below it.

Philadelphia's Feminine Backs.

Another funny thing in Philadelphia is the feminine back. It is straight up and down. It never swerves. I watched it with eargerness for two hours as it proceeded up and down Chestnut street, and the only one I saw that curved was not exclusively Philadelphian—it had been educated in New York and married a western man. I don't know whether this back is straight from a moral or a mental standpoint—possibly it is a combine. It is not beautiful, but it has a peculiar fascination. The western and the southern backs soften and sway and lend themselves to times and occasions; the New York back is always up to date and suits itself to frocks. If it is a tailor-made it swaggers, if it is an Empire, it falls in an easy sort of way, if it is classical it is very straight, but it is a movable back. Gowning, however, has no influence over the Philadelphia back. It is blissfully rigid, and will sit erect in front of a shop counter and say for one hour about the other material being more becoming to me, but this will not fade, and therefore I select it!" Ain't that a back for you?

"Elizabeth, You May Talk

Another type of it was seen in a toy shop, accompanied by a small and beautiful boy. A New York woman, who is a bit of a fool, exclaimed: "What a lovely child!" The back looked around, and there was a glare that meant cold winter in the eyes attached to it, and the small boy was informed that he could choose any toy which would educate him, but that he could not have one that was merely silly. Poor little chap! He was feeling the influence of the back. Between you and me I think that I have now discovered that while somebody says of a southern or western man that "he is the most devoted husband in the world," the same somebody in speaking of a Philadelphia husband would say that he was "good." A young woman who doesn't reverence anything and who wasn't ever downed by the backbone, said the Philadelphia women looked as if they swallowed an extra dose of ramrod tea. I couldn't do this, I could only sigh. But then I am an impressionable creature, and am moved to joy or gladness by the people around me.

Good Cooking Is Appreciated.

But the Philadelphia cooking—well, that's another thing. I have a vague idea that the cooks are trying to soften the backbone by catering to the desires of the flesh. Anyhow, they can devil crabs there better than any place I have ever been; and if you only know where to go, you can get dishes that will make glad your heart. Deviling anything is a science; there are women who can devil a man until he wishes somebody would eat him, and there are women who devil crabs so that nobody wants to eat them. But in the Quaker City they get them of the lovely creamy consistency, browned a perfect golden shade on top, and deviled enough to make you feel conscious of their warmth and glad that it is permeating your whole system. It is almost worth while to go to Philadelphia for the sake of supping on and if you can do it in good company, you will begin to inquire the rent of a house in Philadelphia. If you eat them alone, you go out to look for the good company afterwards, and you will never be so selfish again. Life is much better when it is supported by good food. There wouldn't be so many generally objectionable heroines on and off the stage if they would sit down and eat a proper dinner before they had the interview with the hero, and if everybody ate decently cooked and properly selected dishes, one-half of the world would not be so fretful and the other half wouldn't be so selfish.

I don't believe people can be immoral who eat properly; but the girl who fills her stomach with too many sours and too many sweets, meat that is too well cooked, bread that is not cooked enough, and lets this island of indigestion float around in a sea of ice water, is simply ripe for crimes of all sorts. This is my fad. I don't collect autographs; I don't care a cotninental for crazy quilts; everybody can go to heaven in their own way; but I do insist that every human being has the right to be fed well. And proper feeding includes proper service and pleasant company.

Our Darling Babies.

Now, look at it just this way. That little bit of a bundle of white, soft flesh, that has just come into the world, hasn't any teeth, and not much of a stomach; and so it lives on the food that God has given it, and it is only cross when the mother, who has charge of that food, gets out of temper herself, or eats something that really isn't good, and causes the baby's dinner to disagree with it. As it gets older, and the little teeth begin to come, there is a bit of bread and then some delicate soup, and after a while, some day, there is a chicken bone for the young gentleman. In time it gets a piece of meat, finely cut up, and if you were watching you would see that it pushes away the overdone pieces of beef, and selects those that are very rare. It will grab a rose leaf and try to eat it. Do you know what it wants? The body is claiming some cresses, or some lettuce, or something green, tender and fresh. Your boy baby can give you points on what to eat which your older boy can't, because you have perverted his taste. You have educated him up to too many sweets; he has taught himself the delights of a large, green, sour pickle.

He is given for his luncheon a huge piece of pie, an orange and the money to buy some candy.

Oh, Most Foolish Mothers!

What he really ought to have is a really-righty sandwich—two of them. Not just two lumps of bread with a dab of butter on each, and a thick lump of meat between, but two slices of bread cut from a large home-made loaf, and having the crust carefully pared off, then each should be smoothly buttered, and the beef, or ham, or mutton, or chicken, or whatever it is that you select, should be minced up, and come between the bread. No boy ever refuses to eat sandwiches made like this. Neither will any man, for that matter. Then, of course, you will have some nice white paper to wrap them in, and they will go in a little pasteboard box, that can be thrown away when the luncheon is eaten. Put in a nice, little pickle—one you have made yourself, and you know is good. A bit of cake, if you like, and the orange, by all means. But, in educating your boy, look out for the things you give him to eat, and then he will not start out in the race of life handicapped by a bad digestion and a worse temper.

What We Should Eat.

What do I think people ought to eat? I think they ought to eat beef and mutton so underdone that when the knife sticks in either the bloods spurts out.

I think they ought to eat chicken and lamb and ham roasted to a point, and not baked to destruction.

I think they ougnt to eat green salads, dressed wtih good vinegar and plenty of oil, and having with them a bit of cheese to give the desired flavor.

I think they ought to eat fruit whenever they can, but I think it ought to be eaten in such a way that the seeds and the skins of the fruit are never swallowed.

I think they ought to drink coffee and tea if they like them, provided they are well made.

I think they ought to eat any sweet they fancy, in moderation, but I do not think they ought to insult their stomachs with ices after a warm dinner.

I think they ought to eat everything that is good, provided it is well cooked. And good cooking means nothing greasy, nothing watery and nothing about which one is in doubt.

This sounds like the rules and regulations for good health. I am not a reformer; I never had one of their hideous underwear things on in my life, but I do believe that if we want good men we have got to feed them well. And I think what is sauce for the gander is sauce for the goose. Mr. Gander, you agree with that goose.

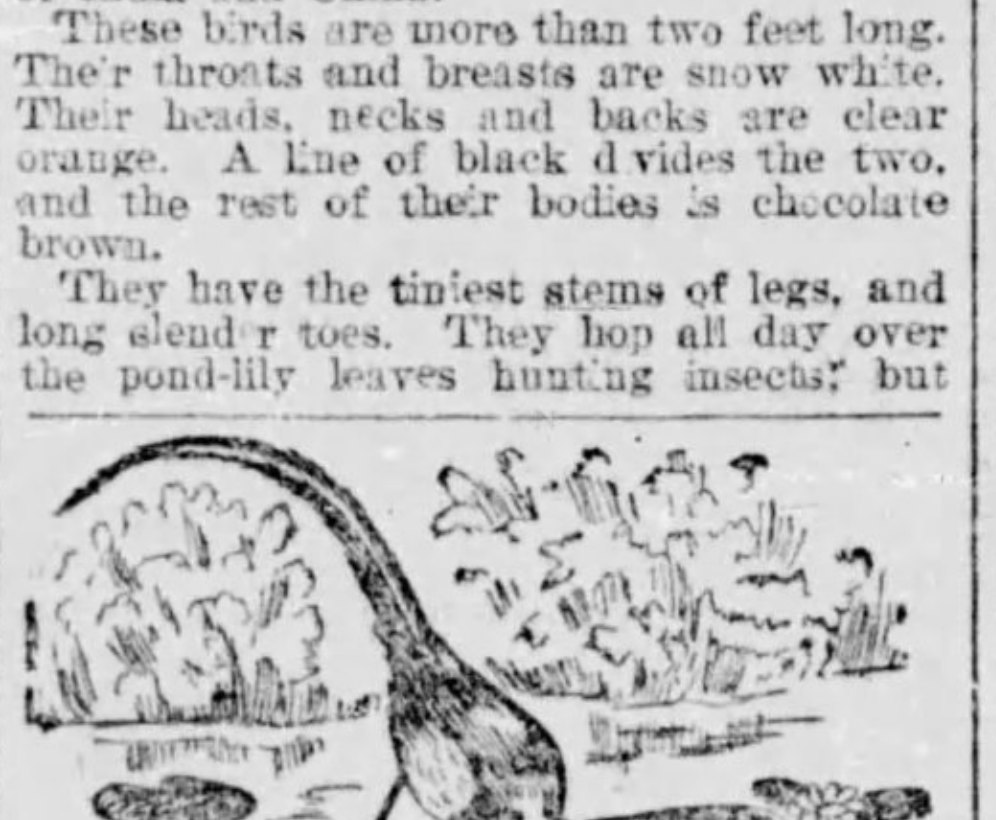
THE BEAUTIFUL JACANA.

A Bird That Is at Home in the Water As Well As in the Air.

Of course fish swim in the water, and birds fly in the air, and ducks and geese, with their web feet, do a little of both. On the way to India I had my first glimpse of flying fish. Hundreds at a time would rise from the water, dart along the surface of the waves until their wings began to dry, then drop into the sea again to wet them for a fresh start. When we reached India I saw something stranger yet; it was the beautiful Jacana—a native of India and China.

These birds are more than two feet long. Their throats and breasts are snow white. Their heads, necks and backs are clear orange. A line of black divides the two, and the rest of their bodies is chocolate brown.

They have the tiniest stems of legs, and long slender toes. They hop all day over the pond-lily leaves hunting insects; but the strange part is when they see a bug in the water. They dive right down to the bottom. They use their wings for fins, and run along under water as chickens run on land. When they are frightened, too, they dive, and if what frightens them keeps them under too long, they creep along to where the water is shallow, and stick their heads out under a lily leaf.—Our Little Men and Women.



The Jacana Under Water.

A COMMON SENSE REMEDY.

In the matter of curatives what you want is something that will do its work while you continue to do yours—a remedy that will give you no inconvenience nor interfere with your business. Such a remedy is Allcock's Porous Plasters. These plasters are not an experiment; they have been in use for over thirty years, and their value has been attested by the highest medical authorities, as well as by testimonials from those who have used them. They require no change of diet and are not affected by wet or cold. Their action does not interfere with labor or business; you can toil and yet be cured while hard at work. They are so pure that the youngest, the oldest, the most delicate person of either sex can use them with great benefit.

Beware of imitations, and do not be deceived by misrepresentations. Ask for Allcock's, and let no solicitation or explanation induce you to accept a substitute.

ODD WAYS OF CATCHING FISH.

It is said that Thoreau, the naturalist, could put his hand into the water and caress the fishes, which learned not to fear him. The Digger Indian sits by a stream and catches fish in his hands for food. In Sind, British India, otters are trained to catch fish for their owners, and in many parts of eastern Asia cormorants are taught to perform the same service. The birds fill their maws with fish, and disgorge them at the command of their owners. Spearing for salmon is common sport in Scottish streams, and other sorts of fish are also speared at night in America by the aid of a big torch, which attracts the fish toward the boat of the fishermen. The Orientals, instead of using one large spear for fish, take a handful of javelins, and usually succeed with one if the others fail to hit.—Harper's Young People.

RAINBOW FRAGMENTS OF COLOR

Caught and Set in the Bars and Squares of Fashionable Tartan Plaids.

Sweets to the sweet and tartans to the tiny, so read we the old motto in this day of checks gone mad. The great success of the season is, without doubt, the clansman's plaid. We see it in wool, in silk, even in velvet. The Lyons manufacturers have felt the craze and are sending us splendid rainbow fragments of color, caught and set in the orderly arrangement by which the bonnie Scot proclaims his name and people. And there are shadows and phantoms of plaid in faintest tints, or soft self colors of brown on brown, in half indistinct and pleasing harmony. It is one of those surprising and dizzy flights of fancy in which fashion occasionally indulges; for last year the plaids did not exist. Now the autumn gown that has not a scarf or sleeves, a bodice, or at least a cravat of plaid is like champagne without its sparkle, or a lass without a lover. In the trousseau of the Princess Marie of Edinburg, two costumes of Scottish manufacture are to be presented by the queen. One is of the prince consort's Balmoral tartan in silk, the other of velvet in the royal hunting Stuart plaid. It is enough.

Though the thought of an epidemic of tartan sends a tremor down the artistic spine, we accept the decree. However, to mitigate the plaid plague let it be remembered that only small and slight women may attempt the entire gown of check. The cross bar lines of color are disastrous to the matronly figure. For them it is permitted only to wear the cravat or to tie a "crush girdle" of the gay silk about the waist over a dark gown, fixing the pointed ends in a snug little knot at the back as one would tie a handkerchief about the waist if it were large enough. The woman with the narrow shoulders and broader hips can make a better average outline if she uses her plaid sleeves, full at the top and narrowed to a cuff at the wrist. The next step in point of daring is the combination of heavy repped silk or poplin plain, with the plaid which comes in velvet of the same color. The skillful modiste looks well to the lines of her gown and gets fair results from the combination for even portly figures. But the slight, small woman, for whom many of the season's modes are too stately and grand, revels in the tartan and sports its brightest tints with the happy security that she alone may wear it with impunity. The little gray, colorless girl blossoms out into a vision of piquant beauty, and the children, both boys and girls, adopt it for kilt and frock with pleasing results.

The tartan dress entire is simply made cut on the cross, edged on the bottom with a narrow double puff or plaiting or folds of velvet or velour, usually black or green, and has almost invariably some form of the Eton or zouave jacket also in velvet. The bias waist shows no seams but is frilled or plaited down to a fitted lining and has a collar and cuffs of velvet. The best surety that we have of the fact that plaid is conspicuous and will probably become common, is that it is being made in the richest fabric, which even wealthy people will not discard immediately.—New York Sun.

Henry H. Fowler, president of the local board of London, says that no puarantine would keep out cholera unless it should be strict enough to ruin commerce.

Pope Leo is a poet of the Virgilian school. He writes in Latin verse with great facility and a volume of his poems in that language is expected to be made public shortly.

Miss Frances Willard strongly advocates Jean Ingelow for poet laureate of England, although she evinces no hope that such will be the queen's or Mr. Gladstone's choice.

Herr Finckel, the Danish inspector of south Greenland, who has not left his bleak domain for twenty-seven years, is an erect, dignified man, with snow white hair and mustache.

The Queen of Denmark has received from her daughter, the Czarina, a gown of gold moire specially woven by a new process. The cost is said to have been close upon £300.

Miss Tomason, an English woman, has performed a notable feat in horseman ship, riding 220 miles in thirty-seven and a half hours, from Innsbruck in the Tyrol, through the Brenner pass and back.

Mrs. William Black, of Orange, New Jersey, sprang from her saddle while riding in Montclair the other day, stopped a pair of runaway horses, and saved the crippled occupant of the carriage they were dragging.

Dvorak, the distinguished Bohemian composer, who has just settled down in New York, began his musical career as a peasant lad, playing at weddings and begging loans in order that he might hear an opera occasionally.

Katherine Tupper Prescott, of Boston, who has attained success in executing medallion portraits in bas-relief, is now working on a life-size bas-relief of Mrs. Potter Palmer, which will be placed in the woman's building at the exposition. Among Mrs. Prescott's efforts have been medallion portraits of Mrs. Kendall, the actress; John Boyle O'Reilly, the poet; Otta Grundmann, of the Boston art museum; Mary Anderson, and Paderewski.

To the Baroness Burdett-Coutts is the credit mainly due of establishing the fishing industry of Balitmore, a village not far from Skibbereen, County Cork. A crowning effort on the part of her ladyship, assisted by Rev. Father Davis, is a railway which the late government was induced to construct for the purpose of assisting Ireland's industrial progress. The line is to be opened shortly and the baroness has undertaken to perform the ceremony.

POWER OF EXAMPLE.

A Garrulous Parrot Is Completely Cured by the Sustained and Dignified Silence of an Owl.

One day a man who had considerable experience with parrots, says the Idler, happened to come in, and when I complained of the bird's loquacity he said: "Why don't you get an owl? You get an owl and hang him up close to that parrot's cage and in about two days you'll find that your bird's dead sick of unprofitable conversation."

Well, I got a small owl and put him in a cage next to the parrot's cage. The parrot began by trying to dazzle the owl with his conversation, but it wouldn't work. The owl sat and looked at the parrot just as solemn as a minister whose salary has been cut down, and after a while the parrot tried him with Spanish. It wasn't of any use. Not a word would the owl let on to understand. Then the parrot tried bragging and laid himself out to make the owl believe that of all the parrots in existence, he was the ablest. But he could not turn a feather of the owl. That noble bird sat silent as the grave and looked at the parrot as if to say: "This is indeed a melancholy exhibition of imbecility." Well, before night that parrot was so ashamed of himself that he closed for repairs, and from that day forth he never spoke an unnecessary word. Such, gentlemen, is the force of example in the very worst of birds.

WILD HORSES.

They Are Becoming a Pest in British Columbia.

In an area of about fifteen miles square below Trout creek there is estimated to be a band of at least 700 wild horses, which are not only eating off the ranges, but becoming a more direct source of loss to stock owners. As an instance of this it may be mentioned that a mare belonging to George Barclay, and valued at $150, together with a valuable filly, were enticed into the band recently.

The government so far, though several times petitioned, seems indisposed to tackle the wild horse question, or give permission to settlers to shoot down these miserable cayuses, thinking that they are all claimed by the Indians.

The Indians, however, are as much injured by them as the whites, and frequently shoot them down, though certainly claiming some of them. All false sentiment should be put aside in a case of this kind, and permission given for a general round-up by both whites and Indians, to take place at a stated date. If this is allowed, the wild horse farce will be put to an end without ceremony.—Victoria News.

WEDGED IN A TUB.

Some Soap Puts a Woman in an Embarrassing Position.

According to the Philadelphia Record residents in the vicinity of Sixth and Washington streets, Camden, were startled Friday afternoon by a series of bloodcurdling screams that lasted fully half an hour before an investigation was made. Then it was found that Mrs. Mary Ray, better known by the appellation of "Mommie," a veritable female terror, was in a most embarrassing predicament.

While washing, she had stepped on a piece of soap and been precipitated backward into at tub of suds. Mrs. Ray is quite large, and was wedged in the tub so tightly that she could not move, and as her knees were as high as her head she did not present a very dignified appearance. Quite a crowd gathered and jeered the woman until kind hands rescued her. She was soaking wet and chattering with cold, but so angry that she chased the spectators away with a club.

OUR CHILDREN'S FAULTS.

"All this talk one hears about mothers being wholly blind to the faults and defects of their own children is entirely wrong," remarked Mrs. Gillifoil the other afternoon as she was paying Mrs. Bluebean a friendly call. "I know that my children are not perfect by any means, and I know it as well as any one on earth," she added.

"To be sure we know our own children better than others possibly can," responded Mrs. Bluebean. "I only wish I could see nothing wrong in the behavior of my offspring, but alas! the fact that they are mine does not blind me to the fact that they are not models of perfection."

"Certainly! I give you credit for having good sense enough to see things as they are, and I'm sure you are as tired as I am of having folks say that we always think our own children the only perfect ones," added Mrs. Gillifoil.

"Indeed I am," assented Mrs. Bluebean. "Now there's my boy Jimmy, he's grown to be kind of saucy to people. I see that real plain, but it isn't strange that he is so, for you know he goes with your boy Dick, who is a good deal older, and so he kind of tries to do as Dick does."

"Why, my Dick isn't a saucy boy," said Mrs. Gillifoil.

"Oh, you don't know what he does when he's out of your hearing," said Mrs. Bluebean. "He's very sly about his tricks, but my boy often tells me what your boy does, but of course I wouldn't repeat it."

"Well, I hope you don't believe all the stuff your boy tells you, for my boy says that your boy is all the time boasting about the fearful stories he 'fills you up' on as he terms it," said the other woman.

"I knew that boy of yours was a mean little wretch," said the woman addressed, "and my son shall never play with him again. Your son would ruin the morals of the best boy in the world, and only for the fact that my boy is naturally frank and honest and manly he would have been led astray long ago."

"You foolish woman!" exclaimed Mrs. Gillifoil, "you ought to be grateful for the influence my boy has exercised over yours. I have felt all along that I must forbid my boy chumming with yours, but I've let him go on doing so hoping that his manly nature would help to make a man out of your boy. But it's of no use trying, your boy is a mean, ugly, freckled-face little imp."

"And yours is a deceitful little cross-eyed wretch, and you haven't any more sense than he has," exclaimed Mrs. Bluebean, as she started for home. And for half an hour after the two women stood on the back porches of their dwellings and shook their fists at each other.

There is an awful sight of difference between our children's faults and the faults of other people's children, after all.

Going to Buy a Watch?

If so, buy one that cannot be stolen. The only thief-proof Watches are those with Non-pull-out BOWS.

Here's the Idea: The bow has a groove on each end. A collar runs down inside the pendent (stem) and fits into the grooves, firmly locking the bow to the pendent, so that it cannot be pulled or twisted off.

To be sure of getting a Non-pull-out, see that the case is stamped with this trade mark. It cannot be had with any other kind.

NO LONGER SKEPTIC.

A Californian Who Changed His Opinion in Regard to Hypnotism.

Pedestrians in the vicinity of Union Square, San Francisco, a day or two ago, witnessed an interesting exhibition of hypnotic power when Dr. V. J. Stearns had a susceptible subject. Oscar Troeber was the unwilling cause of mirth. Troeber, who is well known in the vicinity of Fifth and Howard streets, frequently scoffed at the idea that he could be either mesmerized or hypnotized. In fact, Oscar waxed wroth when anybody hinted that he could be controlled by a superior intellect. His brain was inferior to no man's, and he offered to bet his limited capital that he could not be mesmerized and in emphatic terms denounced mesmerism as a fake. V. J. Stearns heard of Troeber's remarks and concluded to test his power. The bet was made and a committee of judges appointed to watch the result. Shortly after 8 o'clock yesterday morning Troeber appeared at the physician's office and announced with a confident smile that he was ready for the "nonsense" to begin.

It did begin, but the nonsense was all furnished by the skeptic. Dr. Stearns soon had Troeber under control and his subject obeyed his every command. The little party walked up Fifth street to Market, thence to Union Square. On the road Troeber climbed several lamp posts, and at the doctor's command sat on his perch, from where he attempted to convince the astonished spectators that he was the best talking parrot in town. He was next told to go to Union Square and await the arrival of his controlling spirit. When the party arrived Troeber was found safely on a bench eagerly watching for them. The doctor told Troeber that he was a fine looking dog, patted him gently and the subject didn't deny it. He got down on all fours, and to the amusement of the large crowd that gathered barked joyously and licked his master's hand affectionately. At a word from the mesmerist he commenced to eat the grass as if he had not had a meal in a month. At the urgent request of the gardener the doctor told his subject that he had eaten enough. He next demanded a Highland fling for the edification of the crowd of small boys present. Another pass of the hands and Troeber obediently started to climb the flag pole in the center of the square. When the doctor broke the spell Trober gazed about vacantly. As soon as he learned what antics he had gone through he left precipitately amid the laughter of the crowd, a sadder, poorer and wiser man.

TREATMENT FOR NERVOUSNESS.

Extravagant as they may venture to be in the enjoyment of fresh air they should be more careful against excessive applications of water. They should always remember that a man is not a water animal but an air animal. If in anything, a close adaptation of the treatment by the physician to the individual is particularly necessary in respect to the treatment of nervous patients with water. By the abuse of water in nervous diseases that most sovereign of all remedies has, after a short period of popularity, come into discredit. It is certain that a too indiscriminate application of water is a double poison to nervous patients. It is, on the other side, incontestable that water applications in the right measure, and in a manner adapted to the character of the affection, are excellent. Equally advantageous for them are going barefooted when properly prescribed, and the air bath. In connection with the water and air cures certain respiratory and muscular exercises are advantages, and may, in certain advanced stages of the disease, be applied passively by massage and similar operations. Among other things, gardening and other occupations in the open air are of great benefit. Unhappily, in the large cities, where the majority of the patients live, there are only a few so fortunately situated as to be able to enjoy such employment to any considerable extent. Those who are able to go clear into the country, and work in the fields and woods in sweat of their brows, will perhaps, if they are prudent and other conditions are favorable, effect a happy cure of their nervous disorders.—Dr. Bilsinger in Popular Science Monthly.

HOW TO WRITE A POEM.

How can you write a poem? Why
It's easy enough if you only try.

Pick out a word, for example, "June,"
And then on the line below write "spoon."

At the end of the following line write
"dove:"
It is just the thing for a rhyme with "love."

Make the final word of another "kiss,"
It will fit so perfectly with "bliss."

The next line you may end with "wife,"
And the following one with "wedded life."

Then, if you wish, ring in "remorse,"
And wind it up with the word "divorce."

And thus, a poem, you must agree,
Is as easy to write as A, B, C.

All links between "the father of his country" and the present generation have not yet been dropped in the grave. Mr. James McCormick, who lives near Seymour, Ind., says that he once had a conversation with George Washington. Mr. McCormick is 109 years old and still enjoys life.

Three Sleepless Nights

MARLBORO, Ohio, April 14, 1892.

The Hand Medicine Co.

DEAR SIRS:—Having used nearly four bottles of your Colic Cure, I forward you this testimonial, hoping it may benefit many mothers with suffering babies. I am the happy mother of triplets, all girls; now 14 weeks old. When they were about 3 weeks old they were taken with a very severe attack of wind colic. There were three days and nights I had two of them in my arms nearly all the time. I tried all the remedies I had ever heard of without any relief. A sample of your Colic Cure was handed me, which I used with the very best results, and I sent for more at once and I shall recommend it to every mother. I feel there is no language strong enough to express its value. I have also used several of the other Remedies and found each to be exactly as you represented them to be. I trust the Lord will forever bless you for procuring a remedy to relieve suffering innocence.

MARKETS OF THE WORLD

What Is Taking Place in Trading Circles.

The Farmers Charged With Mixing Grain.

The Wheat Lots Reviewed and Much Information of Interest to Traders.

The receipts of wheat at Toledo to-day are 1,212 bus. less than in 1891.

The northwest receipts of wheat to-day are 58,187 bus. less, and at five other western points 23,141 bus. less than in 1891.

The Chicago Herald says farmers are mixing the low grades of wheat, worth 3-5 of one cent per pound, with oats worth more than one cent per pound—that in every carload of oats there is two to three thousand pounds of wheat and barley.

Baltimore says in the Herald: "The Danube and LaPlata are now filling all demands for corn. No sales for future of new corn against millions last year. Baltimore prices 4c above European level."

The visible supply of wheat increased last week 2,488,000 bu. Corn decreased 168,000 bu., and oats 60,000 bu. In the corresponding year in 1891 wheat decreased 143,000 bu.; corn 1,016,000 bu.; oats increased 89,000 bu.

It is believed that strong parties are interested in wheat, but the movement and accumulations are too much for them, and while the markets opened a shade higher and firm, prices went off under the visible and the limited export. But the exports in October as reported by the government are 20,137,000 bu, against 19,107,000 bu in October, 1891. For four months the exports have equaled 70,359,000 bu against 82,252,000 bu in the corresponding period in 1891.

But the outward movement in the first three months last year exceeded the same months this year.

Corn has also been weak and lower. Prime reports do not seem to inspire courage in the presence of the stocks, and the exports from the Danube and from La Plata.

In New York December wheat closed at 77c and May at 84 1-8c, a loss of 1-8c. December corn at 50 3-4c, a loss of 1-4c. May at 52 7-8c, a loss of 3-8c.

In Chicago November wheat closed at 72 1-4c, Dec. at 73 1-4c, May at 78 7-8c, a loss of 3-8c. November corn at 41 1-2c, a loss of 3-8c; December at 41 3-4c, a loss of 1-4c; May at 46 7-8c, a loss of 1-2c. November oats at 30 3-4c, a loss of 1-2c.

In Toledo.—About the usual business in wheat futures was reported. Opening prices were at an advance of 1-8 to 1-4c, but the market became weak and closed 1-2c below Saturday. On the call December wheat sold at 80 7-8 to 80 3-4c. On the regular board December sold at 74 3-4c and closed at 74 1-4c bid; May sold at 80 7-8c and closed at 80 1-4c.

Cash wheat was firmer than futures. Sales light. No. 2 soft sold at 74c, and closed at 73 3-4c, a loss of 1-4c. In the L. S. there were sales at 74 1-2c, closing at 74 1-4c. No. 3 soft sold at 67c and closed at 66 3-4c; rejected No. 1 at 62 1-2c; No. 3 at 53 1-2c; hard No. 2 at 70c; No. 3 at 64c.

Corn—No. 2 at 43 1-2c.

Rye—No. 2 at 54c; No. 3 at 49c.

Oats—No. 2, 31 1-2c.

Clover seed is the erratic commodity for months, and to-day has been one of fluctuations, closing low. On the call March sold at $8.07 1-2. On the regular board December sold at $7.95 to $7.85; January at $8.00, closing lower; March at $8.07 1-2 to $7.95; No. 2 at $7.65.

The receipts of wheat to-day at Minneapolis and Duluth are 886,946 bu., and at five other western points 482,519 bu.; total, 1,369,465 bu. On the corresponding Monday in 1891 the receipts at the same points were 1,450,795 bu., including 15,135 bu., leaving as the movement at five other western points 505,660 bu., compared with 482,519 bu. to-day.

The export clearances Saturday at four Atlantic ports were: Wheat, 98,738 bu., and flour to an aggregate of 300,000 bu.

English markets are dull and lower for wheat, and dull for corn.

Close in New York.

MYSTERIOUS CASE.

Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 14.—A dispatch from Admonton says that yesterday Peter Skamdt, who arrived on Thursday from Minnesota, was found dead on a trail leading south, with a bullet hole through his head. He had also been robbed of a large sum of money, the proceeds of the sale of his farm and stock in Minnesota. His companion, Ole Mickleson, who arrived with him, has disappeared.

WHOLESALE CHINESE IMPORTATION.

New Orleans, La., Nov. 14.—The Times-Democrat's San Antonio special says: It is claimed by the federal authorities along the Rio Grande border that large numbers of Chinamen are crossing the river from Mexico into the United States each week and that the customs officials are unable to prevent this wholesale violation of the exclusion act owing to a lack of river guards. A great many of these Chinamen are brought from the City of Mexico and the southern states of the republic by persons who make a business of smuggling them across the river at so much per head.

REV. T. S. BUCKINGHAM

On "How To Save the Boys From Going to the Bad."

Letters Received in Answer to Inquiries Made of Those Who Have Experience on the Subject.

Yesterday morning the pastor of the Eleventh street Church of Christ, Rev. T. S. Buckingham, preached on this subject. He proved by public statistics that young men between the ages of 15 and 25 are practically outside of Sunday school and church. That not about 5 per cent. of the young men are church members, and only about 15 per cent. are attending religious services. That the women are running the churches, and the men the penitentiaries. He gave as the causes, Godless homes, want of parental control, prowling about the streets at nights in bad company, vile literature, swearing, tobacco and rum. As the cure the gospel, and more gospel. As the preventive—to purify the home life; religious training; make the Sunday school and church bright and cheerful places. One feature of the sermon was the reading of letters the preacher had received from public men embodying the result of their observation and experience. The letter from Rutherford B. Hayes is worthy of an ex-president of the United States.

The following are the letters referred to:

Spiegel Grove,
Fremont, O., Nov. 9, 1892.

My Dear Sir: Your friend is no doubt wise in his choice of his topic. Many criminals, by better methods, can be reformed. But the main question is how to prevent, and prevention is for the most part in the training and education of the young—of the boys and girls. Any discussion which will fix the attention of parents, or teachers, of law makers, and of the public on the importance of proper dealing with the young as a means of preventing crime, is, and must always be in point. Women are always better than men, speaking broadly, and the reason is that taking it altogether their environment, from the cradle onward, is better than that of men. Besides, are not mothers by nature, that is by act of God, superior?

Sincerely,
Rutherford B. Hayes.

Your inquiry, how to save boys from going to the bad, is one of importance. Much depends upon the parents. We find many boys going bad because their parents do not interest themselves concerning the boy's welfare. Many parents allow their boys to roam about the streets and absent themselves from home a greater portion of the night. Boys collect in gangs and very naturally draw others and instruct one another, and form plans for committing petty crimes and very soon become criminals. This could be prevented by parents interesting their children at home by amusements of various kinds and holding a firm hand over them and never allow children to dictate as to what they will or should do.

Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old, he will not depart from it.

Yours,
J. E. Disher.

Dear Sir: In response to your favor of the 8th inst., will say that question of "How to save the boys from going to the bad" is one that can not be answered, and one that the people of this city and country must sooner or later make an effort to find a solution.

This question gives me more concern than most any other. I, in my position, am compelled to seek a solution of it almost every day in the discharge of my duties, and will attempt to give a few views on the subject.

First—The duties of parents to maintain a Christian home for the boys, and to teach the boys that to deceive their parents in small things is just as wrong as to deceive them in greater things. And again, that the home with all of its blessings and privileges is just as much for the benefit of the boys as it is for the favor of the girls.

Second—To provide innocent amusements for the boy at home.

Third—To care for the moral training of the boy. Do not think that your boy is always going to remain the innocent child that you want to kiss and fondle as a babe. The association with boys of older years and less training than yours inculcates bad thouhts in his mind. Watch the moral growth of your bzys.

Fourth—Keep the vicious and yellow-back so-called literature from your boy. Put only such reading in his hands as you would have your girls read. It is a deadly poison to the young and tender mind.

Fifth—Where is my boy to-night? Ask yourself the question. Do not allow your children to run the streets at night, for in the darkness they commit acts that they would not dare to commit in your presence.

Sixth—Teach your children to obey the teachings of God and the Son of Man. Teach them to have a reverence for God's word. Also inculcate in their young minds a respect for law; that without just laws and a faithful fulfillment of them society becomes debased, and no man is safe in the natural pursuits of life.

My dear sir, I believe that if these duties that devolve upon parents were carried out the courts would not be encumbered with the cases of young boys arrested for crime. Such is the experiences and views of Chief Raitz and myself. Sir, we have the honor to remain your obedient servants,

Benjamin Raitz, Chief of Police.
Frank M. Sala, Police Judge.

Dear brother: Your request for me to make a statement concerning the boys of our land, especially referring to the cause and remedy for so many of them going to the bad, is at hand. I am wholly unable to present anything in keeping with the importance of the case. As what you expect me to say is entirely from a Sunday school standpoint it may be interesting to know that in our own state of Ohio there are more than a quarter of a million of boys between sixteen and twenty-one years of age, who are not in any Sunday school and not under any religious training whatever. It is from this class that our reformatories and prisons are chiefly supplied, and the reaching of these is a problem before the Christian people of to-day. The causes which lead to this condition of affairs we will not discuss as they are known to all who keep their eyes open. The saloon, the desecrated Sabbath, the tobacco and especially the cigarette habit lie near the foundation of all of it. Nor is the remedy so easily pointed out. Permit me to say, however, that it is absolutely necessary that our Sunday schools be made more attractive for this class. Those who teach them must be better qualified and must be in sympathy and touch with boys and acquainted with boy nature. One reason why so many of these boys are away from the Sunday school is because their parents are not there and the school is not dignified by the presence of adults as it should be. No father has a right to complain that his boy does not attend the Sunday school any more, when he himself is not there regularly. The only way to keep these boys and young men in Sunday school is to build a wall of fathers between them and the door.

How to reach those of irreligious parents and homes, however, is a much graver problem. I wish it were in my power to throw some light upon it. I believe the line of action is through the Sunday school and chiefly through the misson Sunday school. There should be more systematic house to house canvass for the purpose of reaching them, and when once brought under the influence of the gospel place and exercises attractive by plenty of bright music, instrumental and vocal, and other exercises in the hands of earnest, warm-hearted men and women. I certainly wish you the largest success in coping with a subject of such magnitude and importance as this.

If our nation is ever to be perpetuated it must be by firmly establishing our young men in ways of moral conduct, for this alone is a sufficient foundation for a nation.

"Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord." Yours in the work,

Marion Lawrance.

SHORTER HOURS.

Suggestion by Consolidated Street Railway Employes.

The Idea Is That by An Arrangement for More Rest They Can Do Better Work.

On Saturday a committee representing the employes of the Consolidated street railway called on Manager Lang and laid before him a suggestion for a re-arrangement of hours of work which they thought would be more advantageous to the men and to the company. They make no demand, but simply ask consideration of the proposition by the company. At present one-third of the men work from morning until 6 o'clock in the evening; one-third from noon till midnight, and the other third from morning till noon and from 6 in the evening till midnight. The suggestion of the men is that the day be so divided that none will have to work more than 9 hours. In this way all will secure more continuous and regular rest, and be able to do better service, as well as to better attend to the duties of citizenship and the care of themselves and their families.

The men also suggest that it would be no more than fair to recognize the work of the older employes by giving 18 cents an hour to those who are more than one year in the service, letting the present pay of 15 cents an hour go to those in the first year, and also to give the older men the preference of morning runs.

The consultation between the committee and Mr. Lang was of the most pleasant character, and the manager is strongly inclined toward the suggestions of the men. He has promised, as soon as he can devote the time to the question, to consider it carefully with a view to carrying it out, if at all possible. It may take him some weeks to lay out a plan; but when he has done so he will submit it to the committee.

DISABLED AT SEA.

New York, Nov. 14.—The National line steamer England, which left London October 16, and arrived this morning, reports that on October 29, in latitude 43.35, longitude 57.40, her machinery became disabled and the ship stopped, and for 13 days drifted around unmanageable. She was favored with very fine weather throughout the voyage. On November 8, at 1:45 p. m., in latitude 42.38, longitude 56.13, the machinery had been sufficiently repaired to enable the England to proceed slowly to her destination.

WOODSTOCK, Ulster Co., April 25, 1892.
DR. DAVID KENNEDY:

Dear Sir—Naturally energetic I found it hard to be the victim of fell disease. I was terribly troubled with my stomach, my food would break up sour after IT eating—would wake up every night with a burning, sour distressed feeling there, that made my life almost unbearable. I doctored with physicians and took many so-called cures but none helped me; seeing in the newspapers of the wonderful cures performed by Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y., I determined to try it; after using it a little while relief came and before I had finished the third bottle I was entirely cured. Just think of it stranger, from a sick man—ENTIRELY CURED. ALWAYS Before using Favorite Remedy I was constantly constipated and have not been troubled that way since. But the greatest blessing was the cure it performed for my wife, who previous to taking it was troubled with sickness common to all women She was so ill that she could hardly drag herself about the house; she too tried all kinds of so-called positive cures but with no avail until she began using Favorite Remedy, and that was the medicine we had been praying for. After using it but a short while she began to pick up in health and strength and is a well woman to-day. CURES I honestly believe had it not been for Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy she would have been in her grave to-day. It's the greatest medicine on earth. It's worth its weight in gold.

Yours truly, JAMES W. SHULTIS.

Read this over again ye sceptics and incredulous ones! Ought you not to use this valuable medicine and enjoy health and happiness?

Cook's Cotton Root
COMPOUND

A recent discovery by an old physician. Successfully used monthly by thousands of ladies. Is the only perfectly safe and reliable medicine discovered. Beware of unprincipled druggists who offer inferior medicines in place of this. Ask for COOK'S COTTON ROOT COMPOUND, take no substitute, or inclose $1 and 6 cents in postage in letter, and we will send, sealed, by return mail. Full sealed particulars in plain envelope, to ladies only, 2 stamps. Address POND LILY COMPANY, No. 3 Fisher Block, Detroit, Mich.

Sold in Toledo by all wholesale and retail druggists.

DR. ROWSEY'S
COUGH CURE!

Contains no opiates; will surely stop that tickling sensation in the throat, and if taken according to directions will stop that miserable hacking cough.

Try It. All Druggists.

Heiskell's Ointment

Is a positive cure for all forms of

SKIN DISEASE.

We base this assertion on our observation of over thirty years, in which time a very large number and variety of Skin Diseases have been reported to us as cured, by the simple use of Heiskell's Ointment, without the aid of internal remedies. Many of these were cases of long duration, that had resisted the treatment of the most eminent medical talent in this and other countries. Heiskell's Ointment seems never to have failed in a single instance.

A NEW TORTURE FAD.

"I don't mind how much the girls talk to me through their bonnets," said the man, "but I do object to their talking down my back."

"What do you mean?" asked his chum.

"Just what I say. It's only at the theater or in church, but it always gives me a chill. Last time it was at the theater. She was talking to her escort, but every word she said cavorted on the base of my brain and slid down my spinal column."

"And what did she say?" asked the chum, much interested.

"What didn't she say?" growled the man. "What right had she to be talking at all when the curtain was up and the play on? First sh emust talk of her sandals, because they cramped her feet, and that brought her lips within grazing distance of the back of my neck. I nearly had a fit. Then she wanted her oprea glasses adjusted and asked 'Charlie' if he could use the same focus, and went into a d'sseration on eyes. Then at a thrilling moment in the play she said in a soft whisper, that slid down my spinal column, 'I do believe her diamonds are only paste.'

"But I do not mind this as much as some things that have nothing to do with the paly. 'Don't, Charlie!' gives me a fiendish desire to turn and rend Charlie. The 'Charlies' never talk much, for two reasons. One is that the young woman does all the talking herself, and he can only squeeze her hand on the sly; the other is a wholesome fear that the outraged theater-goers of his own sex will rise and brain him if he persists in drowning out the play."

"Nice state of affairs," said the chum sarcastically, "but it is different in church; rather a pleasant diversion, isn't it, from the fifthly and sixthly episodes?"

"Oh, is it? To have a kneeling penitent to ask on the edge of your coat collar why on earth Mrs. Blank wears that red bonnet so everlastingly, or drop a contribution nickel down your back from sheer nervousness. I'm going to wear a fireman's hat if the girls don't stop the practice. I know it's just a new way they have discovered of making us wretched."

And the man looked so woe-begone that his chum felt called upon to relate his grievance in hopes of a reform.

LIME LIGHT LECTURE.

"Life and Times of Columbus," Tuesday, November 15, in Trinity Parish building, 8 p. m. Single tickets, 25 cents. Tickets for course (six lectures) $1.

ONE REASON WHY.

An eminent critic is asking why it is women don't like Robert Louis Stevenson's books. With surprise the critic discovers that the woman who will patiently plow through the heavy prolixity of Sir Walter Scott, endure the fantastic pretensions of Bulwer, and unflinchingly tolerate the sarcasms of Thackery, simply will have none of Stevenson. Unconsciously a clever woman and a lover of books revealed the cause for the apparently unaccountable prejudice of her sex. She easily admitted Stevenson's ability, strength, even genius, but she didn't like him. Why? Because his novels are, with all their brilliancy, not novels; you see they have no love story, no sentiment, no romance. Stevenson can write what he calls a novel and leave the heroine out. He makes a pretense of a heroine, as perhaps Joan of the "Black Arrow," and Mamie of "The Wreckers," but they are, after all, mere incidentals, not in the least characters in the books. From the days of "Sir Charles Grandison" to "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," the love story and a woman have shared a larger portion of the interest and importance of the novel; and womankind, most conservative of human nature, will not easily resign her claim to a member of her own sex as a character and actor in the modern novel. —Illustrated American.

IN OLDEN TIMES

People overlooked the importance of permanently beneficial effects and were satisfied with transient action, but now that it is generally known that Syrup of Figs will permanently cure habitual constipation, well-informed people will not buy other laxatives, which act for a time, but finally injure the system.

TAGS ARE ALL RIGHT.

Missionaries Will Delight to Bow to the Edict of His Royal Chinese Nibs.

"That is a terrible threat which the emperor of China makes—that if the United States persists in forcing his subjects on this side of the water to register he will retaliate by compelling all Americans within his dominions to wear tags," mused Mrs. J. T. Bishop, who was chatting with some lady friends in the parlor of the Southern when a Globe-Democrat reporter was present. "I understand that the emperor has the tags all ready, and if President Harrison doesn't weaken at once the edict will go forth. The emperor evidently doesn't understand American character. He should order home some of his young men learning to pull stroke-oar and play baseball at American colleges and consult with them. He would learn to his surprise that Americans dote on tags and hunt up all manner of excuses for wearing them. In fact, 'tagged' is rapidly becoming the American citizen's normal condition. He can not participate in a torchlight procession or a picnic, a conference or a convention without his tag. The Americans in China are doubtless praying that Mr. Harrison will stand firm and that they will get their tags. They would prefer to have them about the size of a dinner plate and adorned with a yellow fringe and tassel; still they will be thankful for anything in the way of tags that the emperor of the copper-colored lilliputians sees fit to furnish, if permitted to wear them every day, including Sundays. His majesty of the big umbrella forgets that our civilization is not quite so ancient as that of Cathay—that we still retain many of the childish characteristics of our barbaric ancestors. Let him launch his tag edict at once."

It is well to get clear of a cold the first week, but it is much better and safer to rid yourself of it the first forty-eight hours—the proper remedy for the purpose being Dr. D. Jayne's Expectorant.

A SONG OF FRIENDSHIP.

One friend have I—who love have none—one friend of loyal heart—
A girl whose faith compels my soul to act its noblest part,
Who lives unspoiled by idle praise, unvexed by selfish care,
And who is sweet as she is true, and good as she is fair.
Oh, Love's a flow'r that climbeth high and aims to reach a star,
But Friendship's plant creeps close, and clings with scent that's sweeter far!

She sings to me, and I grow glad; she talks, and I grow wise;
Her ways are frank and sisterly, there's sunshine in her eyes;
Her loving heart holds balm for ev'ry ill that Fate can send;
And earth is fairer, heav'n more near, because she is my friend!
Oh, Love's a song that rings and swells with passion's rapture strong,
But Friendship is a lullaby that soothes a whole life long!

SEAMLESS DRESSES.

A Waist Which Is the Triumph of the Modiste's Art

Seamless dresses have long been talked about, and the modistes have at length perfected a waist which has no seams except those on the shoulders, and these are so overlaid by velvet, of which a yoke is made, that they are entirely hidden. The closing is down the middle of the front, and the material, usually serge, is taken bias and smooth across the back under the arms, then slightly plaited at the waist in front below a deep yoke of velvet. The gigot sleeves have but a single seam, and this is covered with a velvet roll or galloon. The serge skirt is cut in a single piece, the great width of the fabric permitting the selvage to be at top and at bottom, and the only seam may be directly in front, where it is sloped slightly or else far back on the left side, in either case leaving the back quite straight. The top is slightly gathered in front and on the sides, and is held in full French gathers across the back. It is lined throughout with silk, and one new fancy is to put a cable cord of the serge and a piping of velvet around the foot, and also at the top to conceal the seam that joins it permanently to the waist. Other excellent waists for the popular rough serge dresses have a round back slightly plaited to a belt of embroidery or of galloon, with a jacket front curved at the ends opening on a vest of contrasting color, which is plaited to a belt and also trimmed across the bust with a wide band like that used for the belt. This is very stylish when made of dark green serge with a violet velvet vest, with band and belt of Persian embroidery. Three narrow bias folds of the serge, each piped with the velvet, are around the skirt, with a cable cord covered with the serge as a heading. Black serges are also made up in this way with eminence purple velvet, with green velvet, or with magenta pipings, vest and collar. —Harper's Bazaar.

INDIANS AND BALL.

But the Game Was Not the Same As That Played by Us To-Day

In an interesting article on the famous Indian chief, "Black Hawk," in the November New England Magazine, the Indian game of ball is thus described.

"On the level ground west of the town might frequently have been seen, in the early summer time and autumn, hundreds of brawny Indians engaged in their favorite sports of horse racing and ball playing. In either case the play was for stakes, and these always high—two or three horses, a fine rifle or war club. Their game of ball, which Black Hawk mentions as very popular, was played in this wise: A tall post was erected at either extremity of the playground, and the players divided into rival parties. The object of each was to defend its own post and drive the ball to that of its adversary. 'Hundreds of lithe and agile figures,' says Parkman, describing this game as played by the Sauks and Ojibways near Michillimackinac in June, 1763, 'are leaping and bounding upon the plain; each is nearly naked, his loose black hair flying in the wind; and each bears in his hand a bat of a form peculiar to this game. At one moment the whole are crowded together, a dense throng of combatants, all struggling for the ball; at the next they are scattered again, and running over the ground like hounds in full cry; each in his excitement yells and shouts at the height of his voice. Rushing and striking, tripping their adversaries or hurling them to the ground, they pursue the animating contest.'"

SANDALS OF IRISH FISHERS.

These sandals, called pampooties, are shaped to the foot from the raw hide, and kept pliable in water when not in wear; and it is worth noting that Scandinavian fishcurer, Govertson, said he had seen the same foot gear among the Laps in the north of Norway, and that the pampooties bore the same name.—Fortnightly Review.

A Paris letter says that Emile Zola is what in the slang of the day an American would call a "stayer." The ambition of his life is to become a member of the academy. He is the perpetual candidate, the Bertron of the academy. He has once or twice been a candidate and failed. He is now to be proposed as the successor of Ernest Renan and if he fails again anohter effort will be made, the vacant seat which he will hope to fill havnig already been decided upon.
